Reasons? . . . for Owning a Mercedes-Benz

The excellence of this 190 Sedan itself would be reason enough, it is a full-sized car of modest price (about $3,900)—impeccably styled, comfortable, masterfully built . . . You may have a gasoline engine, or the only passenger diesel proved over 26 years, The hand-stitched uphoistery, the hand-smoothed coachwork, the fact that every major moving part is bench-tested before assembly—these are the hallmarks of honest work. proud work, built to endure!

Your Mercedes-Benz will endure. It will stir your own pride years after it has paid for itself. And it will still bring you this unique thrill of ownership . . . the zest of motoring behind the silver three-pointed stark

Ancient Land 'Home' to Missionary's Wife for 9 Year

BY JEAN OTTO

Thailand.

Half a world away. To Mrs. Clark Gardner, the vast difference in sights, sounds and smells from anything she had known made it seem several worlds removed. This different land was to be her home for nine years. Two of her children were born there. Now, she and her husband, pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, plan some day to return to their missionary work in that other world'.

The Gardners' son, Jim, now 14, was two years old when the couple began their work in July, 1952. They had met in St. Paul when both were in school. After graduation Fauna Fay, a music major, had worked a year on the Chippewa Indian Reservation at Cass Lake, Minn., and Rev. Gardner served a year of student pastorate there it was after he served a pastorate at Savage, Mont., that the couple decided on overseas work.

Intensive Language Study

The first two years in Thailand involved intensive six-hour-a-day study of the Thai language. Their first week in Bangkok was a study in contrasts, where beautiful temples stand beside the Klong, a canal where refuse is drained by the rise and fall of the tide. Their first year was at Korat, where they concentrated on the language and went to markets and meetings to hear it spoken. They learned to read, write and speak Thai at the same time, using a primer at first, then progressing to geography, literature, history and Buddhist manuals. During their second year, in Loey, a province on the border of Laos, they began to de some gospel work, increasing it as their own ability with the language improved.

The couple now had two boys. Philip having been born just before the move to Loey. A 15-year-old girl was their 'amah' while the parents continued their language study.

Buriram province on the Cambodian border was home to the Gardner family for

The beauty of the people of Thailand is particularly notable during festivals and parades, when they make use of their lovely jewelry and gowns, and decorate with tropical flowers, such as fuschia, orange and white bougainvillia, gardenias and poinsettias. Above, two young girls lead a procession during a religious festival.

Mrs. Gardner is shown above on the veranda of the couple's home at Roi Et, during their second term in Thailand. During these years Mrs. Gardner had the luxury of a gasoline-operated washing machine and a gas-operated refrigerator. Electricity was brought in while they were there, and from limited use was extended to 24-hour-a-day availability just before they left. This permitted the use of fans, almost a necessity in a land where, in the hot season, temperatures hover at 100 degrees and the humidity hugs 90 per cent.

Gardner laughingly calls their house there a "Chinese Clubhouse". It was frame, with open yerandas and a fence all around, bordered in front with red hibiscus. Drinking water was saved from what ran off the roof when it rained, and was then strained and boiled. All the time the family was in Thailand, they boiled their water as protection from typhus. Mrs. Gardner says the natives have acquired some natural immunity, but outsiders are vulnerable.

the last three years of their first 'term'. Mrs.

Among the hardships were the lack of running water—or even clean water. During their first term the laundry was done by a houseboy, and clothing was pounded to pieces. The second term, they took along a gasoline engine washer and Fauna Fay did her own laundry. There was no electricity much of the time they were there; then it became available from 7 p.m. to midnight. Just before they came home, it was available all day, making the household fan a welcome aid to comfort. Mrs. Gardner says that during the hot season temperatures hover at 100 degrees, with about 90 percent humidity.

No Market Refrigeration

Shopping was another problem for a home-maker in Thailand. All meat was bought at an open market, as soon as possible after killing. There were no market cooling facilities. The couple did have a gas-operated refrigerator in their home, however.

Mrs. Gardner recalls that when she came back to America, she wanted to spend days just looking in store windows. All the while she was gone she had only the clothing she took along, what her mother sent, and what she was able to order from catalogues.

Mail order catalogues are "like gold" to Thailand's tailors, the petite Mrs. Gardner reports. They copy the styles for their customers.

Series of Misfortunes

Two accidents marred the couple's second term. When Wesley was two years old Rev. Gardner ran over him with their British Land-Rover. The child had been on the porch, and had somehow run behind the truck as his father prepared to leave. The wheel passed over the child's hip. The accident happened at 8 a.m., and the next train to Bangkok left at 7 a.m. the next day. The only help available was a shot of penicillin at the government hospital. The parents prayed, and waited through the day, watching the hip and leg that seemed almost disconnected from the child's body. The next morning the boy awoke and asked for food. His hip seemed all right, and after limping for a day or so, he was back to normal.

Shortly after the family arrived for the second term, their son Jim, accepting a dare, jumped from a wall and landed on a broken bottle, severing two toes except for the skin. It was a day before they could reach a hospital, where the toes were sewn back on. They now function normally. At about the same time, Rev. Gardner was stung by a scorpion. For several hours he was paralyzed, but then recovered. "Everything happened at the same time," Mrs. Gardner recalls, remembering her own emergency appendectomy.

Read Medical Book

She became an avid reader of Merck's Medical Manual. "combing its pages for help in diagnosing our family ailments—and purchasing most necessary medicines on the open market. These require prescriptions in the U.S.A. My husband learned to wield the needle." she says. "and give me liver extract shots for anemia—under the direction of the American doctor in Bangkok. I was never brave enough to give shots."

The couple spent a year at home between five-year terms, and, before beginning the second, the family enjoyed a 45-day cruise through the Mediterranean, arriving back in Thailand by way of the Suez Canal. This opportunity for travel. Mrs. Gardner feels, is one of the advantages for their children. They have been in Hong

Fauna Fay Gardner learned to play some of Thailand's musical instruments during her years there. She is shown above with a flute-like instrument of bamboo reeds. Her skirt has a woven border of Thai design. Mrs. Gardner, who "comes from a long line of school teachers, daving back four generations", taught son Jimmy the first grade course during the family's first five-year term at Buriram. She also taught him first semester, third grade, as the family returned by ship for their second term. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Kong, Japan, Hawaii, Tripoli, Cairo, Port Sadan, Sumatra, Singapore, Philippines, and, came home by way of Alaska and the Arctic Circle route.

Missed the Children

Mrs. Gardner's life during the second term was different from the first. The family lived at Roi Et. and their children were in school at balat in Viet Nam. She missed them tremendously, and threw herself into many kinds of work. One of her occupations was teaching English to doctors at the government hospital. She also gave demonstrations on American cooking to the Women's Culture Club. For this she had to take along her own stove and all utensils. There was special interest in breads, cakes and cookies. And ice cream. One girl she taught opened a restaurant, specializing in bakery goods and ice cream.

For two and a half years she served as chairman of promotion and publicity for the Thailand Mission. She was editor of the mission magazine. "The Task". a 28 page publication put together twice a year. She and two other missionary wives collected and compiled over 100 typewritten pages of material for a missionary education course published by the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church and used in the U.S. and Canada. She is interested in writing, occasionally composing poetry.

After her sons left for school in Dalat she wrote "Fledglings", published in "Task'. One of the verses reads.

"These bright, young birds have spread their wings, Once more take to the sky:

Soaring high and far from home Like all brave birds who fly."

With all the children away, Mrs. Gardner

The Gardner sons, Philip Allen, Wesley Mark and James Lee had an experience rare to most American children, as they rode an elephant in Thailand. The boys, while missing some of the more obvious advantages youngsters enjoy in their con country, have had the world as their travel book, and have been in Hong Kong, the Philippines, India, Port Sudan, Cairo, Tripoli and Japan. At left, a lady barber at Roi Et gives a haircut for five cents. The women of Thailand have become conscious of beautifying themselves according to western standards, and, in the cities, many now have permanent waves and wear western dress.

Among those who have received citations have been such well known contributors as Mrs. H. H. Helble, Mrs. T. E. Orbison, Mrs. George Munro, Mrs. William Cherkasky and Mrs. Kyle Ward.

Forty women have received orchids for their work in bettering public health, through the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculesis Association, Mental Health Association, Peabody Manor, VNA, and Red Cross. They have worked with Girl Scouts, the YMCA, United Community Services, on Hospital 'Auxiliaries and the board of Education.

Many Deserving

Those who have been honored by no means represent all the women who give to their communities their time and talents. Many work behind the scenes, their names known only to a few. For this reason, the Post-Crescent will accept nominations for this award, asking that those who submit names outline briefly the contributions of those they feel should be honored. Letters must be signed, but the names will be held in confidence if the writer so desires.

Requisites for choosing women for orchid citations are that they be residents of the Fox Cities, that they perform their community service for the people of this area, and that their work be of general benefit to the people of their city.

The Young Lady Above was six years old when the Rev. Clark Gardner took her picture. She is a third generation Christian, and depicts the loveliness of the Thai children. The girl wears fine gold earrings in her pierced ears. Rev. Gardner is a photographer of considerable skill and his pictures have been published in several magazines. Below is a typical young boy, peddling doughnuts on the streets. At right, a Thai woman weaves cloth for family clothes on a loom set up near her home. When not in use, the loom is moved under the house, built on stilts. Just out of sight at right is a bicycle, the chief transportation vehicle in Thailand.

IF IT HURTS-IT'S COVERED!

Accidents - even small ones - can be painful and expensive. Only your doctor can ease the pain but this policy will help with the unexpected expense. One visit to your doctor for proper treatment of a small cut, burn or bruise and you receive up to $6.00 - an amount equal to one entire year's premium. Of course most fractures, dislocations and accidental deaths are covered too!

The Appleton Post-Crescent offers this multi-coverage accident policy with benefits ranging from $6.00 to $12,500. The small 50c premium means everyone can afford accident insurance. Cash benefits are paid immediately upon receipt of claim, and are paid in addition to any other compensation you may have.

There's less glory and less pressure but just as much satisfaction in junior high school coaching as there is at the varsity level, says Rollie Winter. The dean of Fox

Valley Freshman League coaches, who plans to retire after 17 years at Roosevelt and 20 years in the profession, has no regrets about concentrating on the junior high field. Winter has turned down chances to coach high school basketball and also had a varsity football head-coaching offer. He says he did it because he enjoys teaching and coaching at the junior; high level. A coach can see a bigger improvement in players at the junior high stage than at any other level, Winter reports. He relates another of the other satisfactions that can come to a coach. Jack Ulwelling, whom Winter calls the best junior high player he coached in his 17 years at Roosevelt and who later became an all-stater and a college player, has become a junior high coach in Stevens Point. Ulwelling indicates that his decision to go into that type of coaching was in-fluenced by his admiration for Rollie's work at Roose. Ulants Acquire velt. Winter is typical of the dozens of junior high and grade school coaches in the Fox Cities who work out of Three Japanese the public spotlight but in the best interests of youth development and player molding. Winter believes that at the junior high level the stress should be put on teaching rather than winning. He feels that good coaching and Ball Players supervision have been responsible for the success of the Valley Frosh League. If winning does come, along with the other values, it's a welcome bonus. Winter's 1963-4 team has already clinched a share of the fifth Roosevelt title in the last 10 years. He feels that as a group this is the best team he's had. Wichmann's Ist. Choice Among People with an Eye for Value

You get double-beauty, double-duty from this pair of elegantly styled chairs!

It just makes sense to have a pair of these extra-comfortable chairs. It's the best way to stop family feuds over who gets "the best seat in the house!" The fabrics are lush, but durable with the promise of long, long wear. Excellent color chaice too! You will love what a pair of these chairs will do for your

Both for

"All things to all people?" "NO!"

. it's impossible! No one manufacturer, and certainly, no one furniture retailer can be all things to all people . . . not even Wichmann's. People's tastes and ideas can vary from one extreme to the other when it comes to style, color and price. We couldn't find a store large enough to carry the items it would take to please everyone all the time. There is, however, one thing of which we are sure. In the past 66 years we have done an excellent job of making most of the people happy, most of the time, when it comes to homefurnishings. Perhaps one, or more of the items on this page is just what it would take for us to make you happy too.

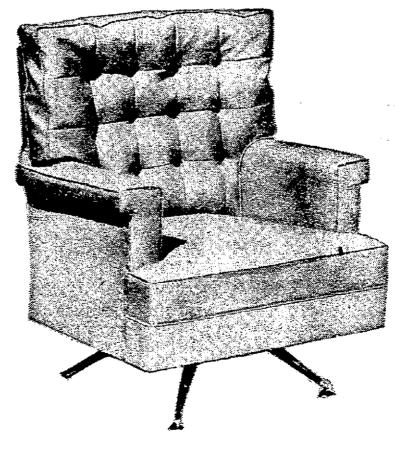

If you've been waiting for a really big bedroom bargain . . . this is it!

A fashion-wise bedroom at a budget-wise price best describes this lovely bedroom group. Its contemporary styling puts emphasis on clean, simple lines, a feeling of lightness, and nice proportions. This furniture is designed for modern, functional living. You must see it to appreciate the richness and bold beauty this expertly crafted bedroom suite possesses. The set is completely dustproofed and superbly finished . . . as only a walnut finish can be.

Triple dresser, mirror, chest and panel bed

You'll go around in circles with this pair of swivel rockers . . . and like it!

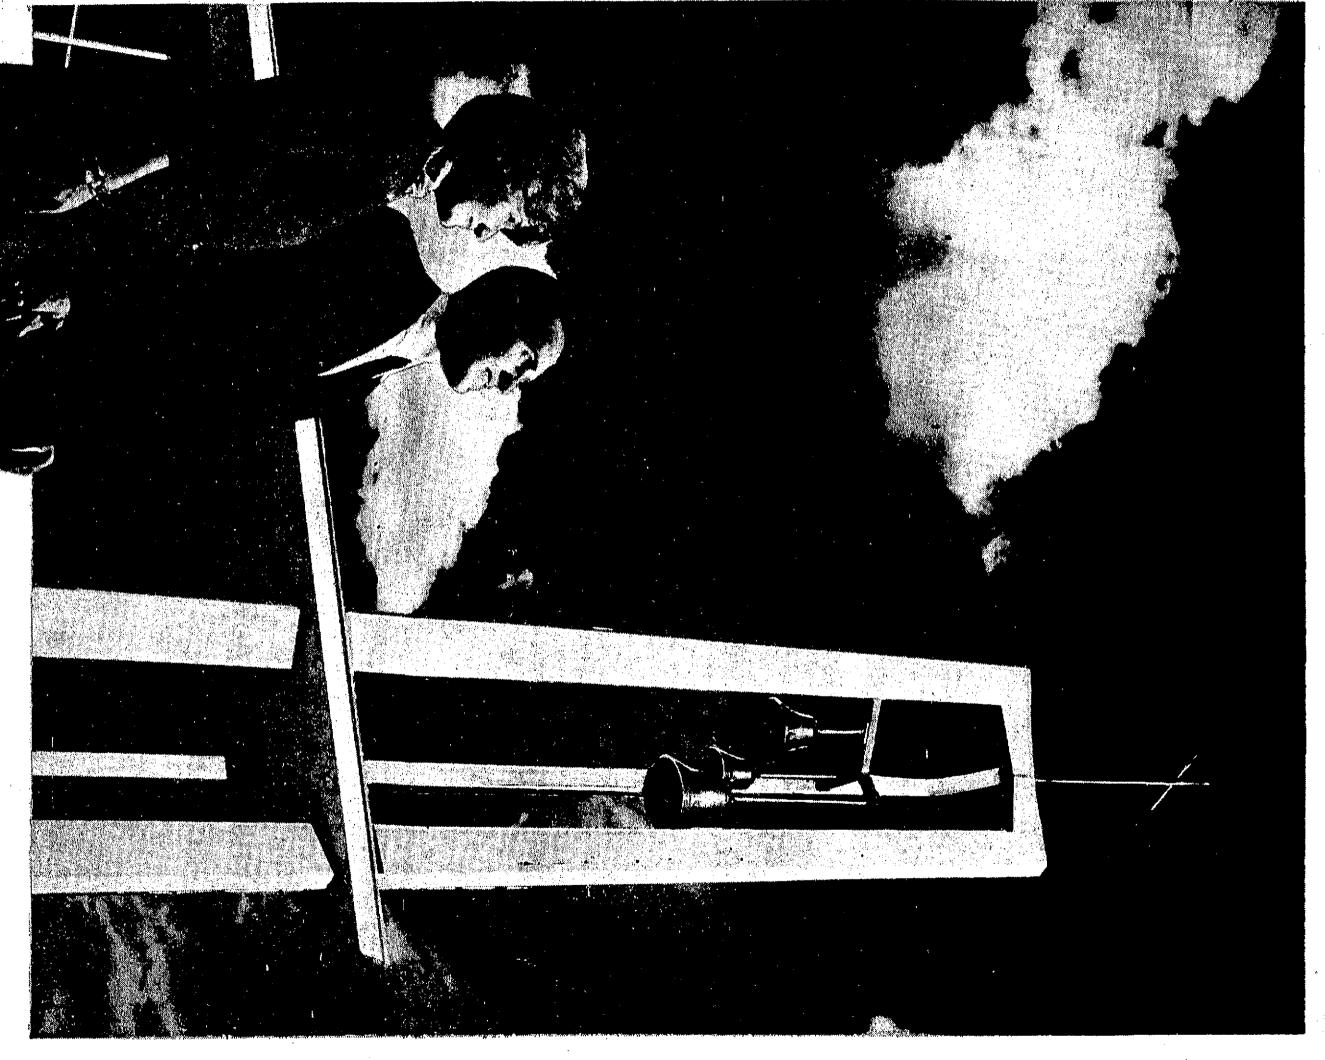

Both for only

$88

These marvelously comfortable rockers swivel on a ball bearing base . . . turns you so easily in any direction . . . to find the best light for reading or sewing . . . to gaze lazily into a log fire. Or, if you can't find anything better to do ... watch TV. They're upholstered in Vinelle . . . glove-soft and leather like. And, look at the color gold, tangerine, choice white, sage and beige. With this pair you'il always be headed in the right direction.

Wedding 3 Spring

On their wedding day a young man and woman stand on the threshold of 'dreams come true'. Their plans of the past, aimed at the time they begin their lives together, are on the verge of fulfillment. Through all the future, they will look back on this day with affection and fond remem-

Long before the wedding day a hundred details await decision. The date itself must be chosen, the size of the wedding determined, attendants selected, the clergyman consulted, the guest list composed, the reception setting chosen and reserved, a gown purchased, a caterer consulted, a florist contacted and a musician engaged. All of these take time, and forethought.

Even as wedding arrangements are made, the couple is planning abead for the days beyond the wedding, when they will establish a home.

It's a busy and exciting time for the bride and bridegroom, planning the day, and all the days that lie beyond, et's fall in love! Why shouldn't we fall in love?" Every year a young couple applies the words of the love song to a situation as natural as all outdoors and, suiting action to the word, heads for that hoped-for lifetime of happy marriage.

Shown here are Miss Joy Fauk and Thomas H. Feavel, who will be married in May, Joy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Fauk, 1314 N. Superior St. Her fiance's parents are Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Feavel, 739 W. Fifth St.

And, as sure as daytime follows night, so, for the majority of lovers, do the plans for the consummation of their plighting follow the bluebird and robin into springtime. Plans that, even for the most simple of marriage ceremonies, involve the prospective bride and groom in a veritable maelstron of seemingly endless activity.

Much of the action turns upon the suggestions and the experiences of their elders; but much of what the young couple desires to have and to hold in the way of housing, transportation, wardrobe, household needs and the hundred and one other effects necessary to living in something approaching comfort and joy falls to the wisdom of their choice. And April, May, June, or whatever month is selected for the moment of magic, comes on with accelerated pace as the days number down to the wedding day.

Shopping is so much more fun—and economical—when planned ahead as did our "couple of the hour," pretty Joy Fauk and her handsome husband-to-be, Thomas Feavel. A May wedding is scheduled, but Joy and Tom found February days none too early to purchase and to prepare the acquisition of what would be needed on the "big day," and for the days that will be.

Our cameraman caught up with this loving duo. Caught up with and dogged them perseveringly as the two traveled the trade route and shopped at the oases of merchandising splendor.

The following pages are a record of what the bridal couple admired and acquired from among the wares of Appleton's fine shops. We present them here as a shopper's guide to those of you who, like Joy and Tom, will soon prevail among the joyous for whom wedding bells will play a spring and summer's thapsody.

No Laundry or Dry Cleaning Problems for This Young Couple

Peerless Uneeda Laundries' H.L.S. (Household Linen Service) removes worries about coming washdays for Joy as she and her intended learn how inexpensive the service is. Bed, kitchen and table linen are laundered at the low rate of eight pounds for $1.19. Shirts in any family service are laundered for 20 cents each. Joy and Tom agree that Peerless Laundries are really specialists in fabric care.

Just one call, REgent 3-4428 or REgent 3-6678, takes care of both laundry and dry cleaning. Peerless has four convenient locations: Valley Fair in the V.F. Shopping Center, Northside, 200 W. Wisconsin Ave., Uneeda, 518 W. College Ave., and Peerless, 307 E. College Ave., to provide best possible service. Peerless Uneeda has the essential facilities, the necessary knowledge plus the important incentive to please.

Joy and Tom Seek The Advice of Jeweler August Frisch of Tennie's

Tom uses a Gemscope to check diamond quality as Joy looks on. "Every ring is a quality ring," says August Frisch as he explains the features of the famous Artcarved selection. Know what you are buying before you buy is a must at Tennie's. It is always a pleasure to shop at Tennie's because of the large selection of diamonds in all price ranges, and a variety of styles and combinations to see and try on. Here, also, they have an opportunity to select gifts for members of their wedding party.

Joy and Tom took time out from their shopping trip at Valley Fair for a leisurely coffee break at the popular Birchwood Restaurant. Here serving them is Virginia Mueller. Like many other Valley Fair shoppers, they returned later for a noon time luncheon and were amazed at the wonderful selection on the menu but settled for Birchwood's famous 97c special luncheon served each day and found it to be a very tasty, complete dinner which didn't hurt their budget at all. Upon resuming their shopping, the future Mr. & Mrs. Thomas Feavel, paused to check the directory of 36 stores and offices along the beautiful enclosed weather protected mall. They were impressed with the large variety of stores and services available here to take care of most every pre-wedding, home planning and furnishing need. Shopping finished, they returned to their car which, of course, they had parked free in the big two thousand car Valley Fair lot, commenting on the extra wide parking stalls that add so much to the motoring shopper's ease. You can be sure that Joy and Tom enjoyed their shopping experience at Valley Fair and will return often.

Off to a Good Start With An Appleton Building and Loan Association Home Mortgage Plan

Though Joy and Tom were impressed with the 4% dividends paid on savings accounts at the Appleton Building and Loan Association, they were even more impressed with the friendly and helpful way Mr. Arthur Snell pointed out to them how a convenient home loan would be processed for them. Whether they were planning a new home or buying a home ready for occupancy, Mr. Snell explained to them how a low-cost home mortgage loan could be individually designed to suit their particular budget. They liked the payment plan which included principal and interest on their loan and also payments on taxes and insurance for the coming years. No sudden bills to upset their well-planned budget!

Add Glamour, Practicality to Trousseau

The Luxury of Ribbed Crepe, left, is designed with a simplicity that stresses the richness of the fabric. The soft mood of spring is shown in the bowed neck and belted waist. For an afternoon of browsing through historic landmarks, you'll be suited fashionably in three tailored parts, right. The Chanel-inspired jacket and slim skirt are a spongy texture of rayon, silk and cotton tweed. The blouse is textured rayon and silk.

Whether spending your honeymoon snooping through out-of-the-way antique shops, relaxing at a well-known resort or staying at a plush hotel, you'll want to look the part of a perfect bride. Trousseau fashion has turned to softer, more feminine shapes for 1964, evoking the spirit of the season with closer fit, gentle blousing and soft draping.

Silhouettes close in gently on the figure. Waistlines are definitely in and are frequently belted. The attenuated torso accentuates the waist with a line dropped to hipbone level or below. Overblouses are hip bone level or longer; often they're bloused to the hips. Rigidly tailored costumes are softened with blousing, tucking and draping The important sleeve is long and wrist buttoned or three quarter and cuff linked. Necklines are turtled, gently rolled and recessed, draped or tied softly at the throat. Bodices are gently bloused above elasticized to fit waists.

The sleeveless jacket or coat is the fashion leader's signature for Spring 1964. The forerunner of the soft and feminine look-the jumper-is still one of the most important looks. There is a skirt shaping for every figure. There are swinging skirts with knife sharp pleats, softly gathered skirts, sheaths, and modified A-lines.

Fabrics provide more interest than ever. Textures and patterns are freely combined. Paisley surahs with textured ravons: tucked crepes with pin dotted crepes; textured rayon and silk with tweed are frequently matched in the same pastel tone.

Glen plaids, monotone tweeds and houndstooth checks plus bold prints are seen throughout the collection. The spirit of softness is ever present in our pebble textured and rib rolled rayon crepes.

This is a season for color. Brights are: azalea pink, sunny yellow, apple green and cornflower blue. One of the most flattering basics is a new shade appropriately called mortar. Still important are black with white, ink blue, and lilac.

A Thoughtful Bride Registers in Prange's Bridal Registry

An important step in any wedding is the selection of fine china, glass and silver for a lifetime of gracious dining elegance. Under the careful and expert guidance of Roger Van Boxtel, Joy Fauk and Tom Feavel contemplate a beautifully correlated table grouping from Prange's vast selections of stark modern to fancier, more elaborate settings by such world renowned names as Lenox, Havilland, Wallace, Towle, Josiar, Fostoria and others. But just as important is the thoughtful consideration of registering their pattern choices in Prange's Bridal Registry where all their many friends and relatives can simply check to make certain the wedding and shower gifts they give will be just what the happy couple want and need as they start their lives and futures together.

The happiest brides place themselves in the calm, capable, competent hands of Prange's Bridal Consultant, Miss Alice Severson. Lovely bride-to-be Joy Fauk knows her wedding will go smoothly from start to finish under the experienced guidance of Miss Severson. And as a Prange bride, Joy would receive a Bridal Book of Plans, a 'something blue' garter plus answers to all her questions on wedding etiquette from spoons to honeymoons! White ring bearers' pillow, white aisle runner service plus dressing service at home and church are other marvelous services provided for bridal parties completely gowned at Pranges, all designed to keep a Prange Bride a Happy Bride!

Magician Leads Beguiling, Bewitching Life

BY JUDY RUSSELL

OSHKOSH - "Ninety per cent of magic is misdirection." is the expert opinion of Oshkosh's gift to the world of tom foolery and magic. Curt Walter. The veteran of 44 years of magicianship gave his first performance at Merrill school at the tender age

After touring the "real" vaudeville circuit and then appearing in the unit shows during the big band era, Mr. Walter entered a machine gun outfit during World War II. "When they found out I was a magician and comedian they. sent me to a special service school. Then I was put in the Red Skelton show which played all over the United States. I did over 600 performances with the special service unit," the personable showman commented.

It was nothing but show biz for civilian Walter for three of the Houdini Club which held years after the war but then "I wanted to settle down and stop traveling so much, so I took the club dates-not working on a regular schedule." Mr. Walter does sales promotion work for the Oshkosh Corrugated Box Manufacturing Company and performs his feats of magic about once a week, "You might say it's an avocation that has developed into something quite useful in my line of work." he

You might also say that Mr. Walter was born to be a magician. His dad, Joseph Walter, was quite a magic artist in his own right and taught his son the rudiments of the stage. The elder Walter was a close friend of Harry Houdini, the master of magic, and trouped at the same time as Houdini.

Started Houdini Club "My dad was the originator its 25th anniversary convention at Appleton last year," Mr. Walter stated. He said the club started out with about five members. The elder Mr. Walter worked with Houdini through Science and Invention Magazine in exposing frauds in the field of "spiritualistic manifestations." As a result of his father's friendship with the great Houdini Mr. Walter is the possessor of a recording made at one of the seances held by Mrs. Bess Houdini after the death of her husband. The seances were held in Hollywood and many of Houdini's professional friends, including humorist Will Rogers and movie king Clark Gable, were present when the pressed star recording was made. Mr. Walter takes the recording to some functions where he performs but regrets that it was not played at the Houdini Club convention. "I was out of town at the time, and, to my knowledge, not many people know of the existence of the record," Mr. Walter explained.

Training Daughter Mr. Walter's wife, Carol, was a part of his act until daughter Dale (Dee) came along. "Now we are grooming 12-year-old Dee for the act," the proud father remarked. At one time the handsome magician used rabbits, doves and gumea pigs in his fact. "After the show was over I gave the animals to kids in the audience," he laughingly recalls.

kids are the "best and the toughest audience to play to. They instinctively try to get ahead of you but they cue real good and they're spontaneous." Mr. Waller had his favorite audience Tuesday evening when he appeared as part of a "Family Fun Night" at Webster Stanley Junior High School.

The Oshkosh magician was chairman and master of ceremonies of the event, sponsored by Emmeline Cook PTA and he came up with some show business friends from Wisconsin to highlight the program. They were Appleton ventriloquist Bob Neller and "Reggie," juggler Johnny Boettcher, also of Appleton, and Marvin Fleck and his family of Acro-Tikes, now of Mishicot. Mr. Walter, who worked with these performers before, declared that "they are club-dating now too."

Always New Crowd

The busy magician stated their spring chapeaux from over Wisconsin. "There are booking agents in Sheboygan. Milwaukee and Chicago who help fill the dates. They line up acts for fairs, conventions and various programs

Although Mr. Walter follows the same basic routine in his act, he is always adding to or improving it. Seems as if Madison Avenue is a long street that leads right to the schoolhouse door. Anyhow, that's the idea you get after talking with some of the educators around town. Sometimes you have trouble understanding their "modern image."

For example: "Structural Linguistics." Near as we can figure, that's what we called grammar when we were young. "Language patterns" are probably sentences. Once upon a time we used to read. Today children "experience literature."

Used to be they had classrooms in schools. Now they're "teaching stations." Or sometimes. "multipurpose rooms."

Here are some other expressions which we're not sure we understand — that have been beard in education circles in the Fox Cities:

Group dynamics . . . sequential material . . . psychometric service . . . qualitative growth . . . reading readiness . . . resource people

We hope educators in the area den't think we are showing "unsatisfactory emotional and social behavior," or having "adjustment problems." but rather that we are just "structuring an on-going educational program"

Along the same lines, this was heard from a "wise man at a board of education meeting in Appleton one night: "Budget-wise, we are in pretty good shape, money-wise."

One more from the schoolhouse. Mrs. Vira Stoner, Appleton High English teacher, cites Murphy's Law which says. "If anything can go wrong, it will." Corollaries we have heard include, 1. You can't win. 2. They won't let you play. 3. You can't get out of the game.

Eugene Upton, of the Social Security office in Appleton, offers one of the best statistics we have heard in a long time. He says there are 11,862 Charlie Browns in the U.S.

This week the Post-Crescent received from the Air Force a photo that falls into the Things-Have-Changed-Since-We-Were-There Department. The picture shows Airman Gary L. Korth, a son of Mrs. Clara. Korth of New London, congratulating his Colonel for being promoted to colonel.

Student Minstrel Turns Actor For Lawrence College 'Macbeth'

BY MARK E. OLIVA

The truth about Macbeth-he's not really a hero turned villain but a minstrel turned actor.

Although this may not apply to Shakespeare's "Macbeth", it describes the Lawrence College version. P. K. Allen, who plays the role in the school's presentation of the Elizabethan drama. running Tuesday through next Sunday.

P.K. a veteran in Lawrence theater work. aspires to a career on or with the stage. And he hasn't set his initial goals short. After graduating from Lawrence. P.K. hopes to do post-graduate study in drama. in England, if possible.

His present dream is to help form a national theater in the United States, modeled in some ways after the Moscow Art Theater. His proposal would include both a drama school and repertory company. He said the theater could represent the nation's art.

Plans to Teach

He hasn't decided yet whether he eventually wants to occupy a director's chair or stick to acting, but he feels a direct move-from school to the theater would be too unstable, so he plans to teach drama first.

P.K. described in detail the sensation that playing Macbeth induces in him: "When speaking the lines I feel physically small. Maybe Im only impressed with Shakespeare, but I feel small in the face of the play."

Allen added that he'd "never cease to be impressed by the intricacy of the play." but added that its strain has produced some undesirable physical

"I'm beginning to feel less tolerant of people. My school work's coming along fine, but I tend to lose my temper easily. When you're under physical and emotional tension and have to express intense emotion two to three hours daily, you're under a terrible strain—but it's certainly worth it."

Gain in Maturity

P.K. explains "it's worth it" because "you gain in maturity—you're able to see through the eyes of a scripted character." He added that part of the joy in working with Macbeth comes from associating with Prof. F. Theodore Cleak.

"He doesn't tell you to do this and that but teaches while directing and makes a play an exciting and interesting experience."

The part of Macbeth has been unique for him. P.K. says, because of Macbeth's middle age, "40 to

"While it's comparatively easy to portray a young or old man. Macbeth is difficult because he's neither extreme. He's strong and in his prime, and I'm not sure how a man feels at this age." he said.

P.K.'s feelings about the portrayal become most intense when the witches confront Macbeth. "You can feel evil being 'stabbed' into Macbeth's body, transforming him until he reaches the point of FO

BY JAMES AUER

"Appleton in line!" trumpeted the Appleton Crescent of March 2, 1861. "Look out when the bell rings! The cars have come! O, believe me, this is pleasant, riding on a rail."

The cars had indeed come. Only three days before, on Feb. 27, 1861, "amidst the shouts of the multitude, the firing of guns and music by one of our city bands," the railroad locomotive Appleton, with a construction train attached, arrived at the Chicago and North Western depot.

It was a time for jubilation, for celebration. The Fox River Valley, a burgeoning industrial and agricultural center, was at last beginning to hear what the Crescent's editor called "the snort of the iron horse"

Slumbering Giant

Wisconsin, in the decade before the outbreak of the Civil War, was a slumbering giant gradually awakening to a realization of its enormous economic potential.

Although the southern portion of the state had already been crisscrossed by rails, there remained what railroad historian Roy P. Martin has called "a huge reservoir of standing timber . . . untouched save in a few spots along the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River."

This vast area of unbroken forest wilderness, some 200 miles square, contained a fantastic hoard of timber and from ore—a hoard that had already attracted the attention of Eastern financial interests as well as local promoters.

At the same time, in the rapidly-growing communities along the Fox River, merchants, industrialists and farmers were crying for a means to take their surplus products—goods they could not sell in the immediate area—to the great markets of the East and South.

Wagon traffic, via the primitive roads of the period, was inadequate. Lake steamers could not tap the vast, inland resources of the state. Only the railroad seemed capable of opening up the central and northern portions of Wisconsin.

Thus, for a combination of motives—idealistic as well as economic—communities throughout the Fox Valley acted to bring the railroad to Wisconsin's finest farms and most promising industrial sites.

First to reach the valley was the Chicago and Northwestern. Coming in from the south, the North Western arrived in Oshkosh in July, 1858. Stage lines, running between Green Bay and Appleton, had already adapted their schedules to the railroad.

Fast Steamers

"Special fast steamers left Appleton to make the train that took off from Oshkosh at noon for Chicago," reports Lillian Mackesy, Post-Crescent staff writer who has done original research on the railroad

"The steamer Pioneer was one of these. It left Appleton at 8 a.m. and arrived in Oshkosh shortly before noon: on the return trip it carried passengers from the end of the line back to Appleton, where stages and other steamers took them to their destinations."

But the railroad did not halt its expansion at Oshkosh. Working inexorably up the valley, it arrived the the outskirts of Neenah-Menasha in 1860, occasioning an inter-city battle that continues to have repercussions even today.

Until the coming of the North Western. Menasha, with its U. S. lock, canai and dam, had appeared to have an advantage over its neighboring city of Neenah. But in 1860 the tables were turned as "the very waterway that seemed so valuable made it difficult for the Chicago and North Western, coming in from the south, to reach Menasha," according to Martin.

"And Neenah fought savagely to prevent its doing so. At first the North Western was stopped at the south boundary of the city and a station built there. Then when the road wanted to continue on to Appleton and Green Bay, the people of Neenah manipulated things so that the building was started around to the west of the city, which would put Little Lake Butte des Morts between the rails and Menasha.

"A visit from some of the North Western officials showed them the folly of such a course . . . and a new line was run which cut across the corner of Doty Island and gave some access to Menasha. But the station was and is NEENAH-MENASHA with the accent on the first name and the situation has never been a happy or satisfactory one for Menasha people."

In order to attract the railroad, communities along the route bonded themselves to bear part of the cost of construction. A year before the first locomotive steamed into Appleton, the people of that city had voted to assist the road to the amount of $20,000 for the extension from Oshkosh. The first passenger train arrived in Appleton March 5, 1861, and according to press accounts of the time, Willy Pease and Co. had made the first shipment of 100 barrels of flour over the line the preceding week.

Continued North

Having come to the valley by way of Janesville, Watertown and Fond du Lac, the North Western now continued on to Ford Howard, which it reached in 1862, then went on into the upper Peninsula of Michigan.

But for all its industry and efficiency, the North Western did not tap the vast, unbroken forest liderness that lay to the northeast of the fertile Fox River valley

It remained for the promoters of an equally famous 19th century line, the Wisconsin Central, to drive north to Ashland and eventually open the irontich Mesaki to rail traffic.

A memorial plaque on the front of Hetel Menasha... the letters W.C. printed on the cab of each Soo Line locomotive... these are the only visible tokens that remain to testify to the stormy history of Wisconsin's own railroad line.

But in its day the W.C. was the center of sharp controversy and civic pride, retimony and devotion, tortuous financial manipulations and loyal employe service.

As early as 1850 Judge George Reed, of Menasha, had been trying to promote and build a railroad to Menasha from Manitowoc, with the aim of ultimately connecting Menasha to the Mississippi, Judge Reed did actually succeed in having a few miles of rail laid on the Manitowoc end, but he was unable to find enough enthusiasm among Manitowoc residents to put over the venture.

Land Grant

The possibility of a U. S. Government land grant was, in those days, the most attractive incentive for aspiring builders of railroads. And military considerations lay behind the government's willingness to trade virgin timber to cross-tied miles of railroad.

Ever since the conclusion of the Civil War. Washington had been enjoying chilly relations with Great Britain, which had been a bit too friendly toward the Confederacy during the war between the states. For this reason the War Department was anxious that a military railroad be built through Wisconsin to the Canadian border, so that Canada could be easily reached from the Mid-West as well as from the East.

With this in mind, the government offered to potential railroad builders a land grant embracing "every alternate section of public lands (of 640 acres each) and equalling 6.400 acres per mile, to be taken out by odd numbers within 10 miles on each side of the line of the road."

The Reeds, then joined with Mait Wadleigh, a Stevens Point lumberman, in forming the company which was the predecessor to the Wisconsin Central railway system. They next enlisted the aid of Judge James Duane Dety, former territorial governor, in securing a federal land grant. After making proper application, and using whatever political influence they possessed, they were assigned a grant, for construction of a railroad "from Doty Island (at Neenah) to Lake Superior."

Judge Reed now set off for Boston, the nation's money market, in search of the necessary financing. There he found a sympathetic listener in Gardner Colby, a retired textile manufacturer who had long been appreciative of Wisconsin's iron and timber resources. Colby and Reed named Elijah B. Phillips, at that time president of the Lake Shore and Northern Indiana railroad, to assume responsibility for building the new Wisconsin Central line.

For two years prior to the actual start of construction in June. 1871. Judge Reed drove up and down the proposed route, persuading the townspeople to put up sufficient funds to buy the right-of-way, clear the land, build the grade, provide culverts, bridges and cross-ties for the expected rails.

Responding to the respected judge's urgings, Menasha theated a bond issue for $50,000, Neenah, a similar amount: Ashland, $20,000; Payfield, $1,500, Stevens Point, $30,000, and Waupaca, $50,000.

The Wisconsin Central was officially form on Feb.

4. 1871, when the name of the Portage, Winnebago and Superior—a railroad company in which the Reeds were active, and which consisted of the incorporation of several other small companies—was changed to the Wisconsin Central R. R. Co. This firm consolidated with the Manitowoo and Minnesota Railway Co. July 10, 1871.

Railroad headquarters, established in Menasha's new National Hotel early in 1870, were moved to the Bates building in Menasha in November of that year, and two years later general offices were established in Milwaukee, with permanent operating headquarters at Stevens Point.

Reuben Scott, a pioneer settler of the village of Menasha, was given the task of building the railroad's first division, from Menasha to Stevens Point. Scott broke ground June 15, 1871, at the western end of the North Western bridge spanning Little Lake Butte des Morts, and his crews tinished the 63 miles of track in 120 days.

The first train rolled into Stevens Point Nov. 15. 1871, and the move was bailed as "the first step in making Stevens Point the foremost railroad center in northern Wisconsin." The Wisconsin Central was to continue to use the North Western railway bridge as an entry into Menasha until 1881, when the mail line was relocated from a point 1.5 miles west of Menasha directly into the town of Neenah, thus eliminating Menasha as a main line station.

During the year 1871-72, 6,000 tons of 57-pound iron rails were ordered to be shipped by water via Green Bay up the Fox River to Menasha. During the same year, contracts were awarded for 100 platform cars, 50 box cars, 40 dump cars, and 12 coaches and baggage cars.

Smooth Achievement

Building the line from Menasha to Stevens Point had been an impressively smooth achievement, but completing the line to Ashland was a different matter. The proposed right-of-way led through "an unbroken forest wilderness entirely devoid of towns, settlements or organized society." in Roy Martin's words. No financial aid could be expected from this primitive country. The only lure was the federal land grant which had been alletted to the railroad—a million acres of standing timber.

Ashland in 1872 was a community of "Brave men and bad women."

Railread construction crews, working from this brawling settlement, headed south toward other W.C. crews that were working their way north. In 1877 the company, emulating larger Eastern lines, opened a company-owned hotel, the Chequamegon, at Ashland. Three-stories high and with 400 rooms, this was billed as "a palatial editice with regal appointments, magnificent in design and permanent in structure, over-locking the tinest harbor in the north..."

After 30 years of service, the hotel was cut into smaller sections, one of which remained on the main street of Ashland as Menard hotel.)

By 1875 it was possible to travel from Milwarkee to Ashland on the Wisconsin Central—a trip that took Sam S. Fitield, a one-time senator, 16 days. Fitield spent most of that time "bucking snow and riding bobsleds between Worcester and Panokec, where Wisconsin Central had not yet placed its rails."

Promoters Ousted

In the meantime the Eastern financial interests had managed to remove the original Wisconsin promoters from positions of authority, and by 1874 both Reed and E. G. Roberts, another Menasha man, had been dropped from the board. The last link in the original Wisconsin Central project, Menasha to Ashland, was completed in 1877. For completing its originally asigned footage, the railroad received a land grant of 888,288 acres, which had netted the company $6 million by 1917.

In 1881 the railroad struck south to Milwaukee, with construction of right-of-way to Fond du Lac. where it connected with the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, with trackage rights for operations of trains into Milwaukee.

For 20 years this Neenah-Fond du Lac section was known as the Race Track, as passenger trains of the North Western and Wisconsin Central, operating on identical time schedules and with similar coach equipment, sped to and from Milwaukee on tracks only 200 feet apart.

"The daily races staged by the rivals were fast and speciacular." Martin writes, "and oldsters still discuss those dramatic speed contests in warm and partition sentiments."

By 1983, new locomotives, deluxe sleepers and coaches had made the W.C. real competition to the North Western. Finally, in 1886, the Wisconsin Central pulled into its own Chicago Terminal, following an expenditure of $4.5 million on real estate and right-of-way.

Disaster Strikes

From 1888 to 1893 were prosperous years for the Wisconsin Central, but in 1893 disaster struck. The Northern Pacific, which had operated Wisconsin Central under a lease, was adjudged bankrupt, and the Wisconsin Central went to court for permission to be released from its agreement with the N.P. The court approved the petition, and Wisconsin Central went into receivership.

"In the tragic readjustment that followed the N.P. violation of contract and abrogation of the Wisconsin Central lease, the Central lost entirely its immeasurably valuable holdings in the Chicago Grand Central Station, tracks, yard and other terminal properties," Martin writes.

In July, 1899, all properties unified under the Wisconsin Railway Co. were released from receivership, and in 1908, the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway, better known as the Soo Line, acquired convership of a majority of the constanding capital stock of the Wisconsin Central.

Under an agreement entered into April 1, 1909, control of all property of the Wisconsin Central was transferred to the Soo Line for a period of 99 years.

The familiar shield of the Wisconsin Central was now removed from cabs of all the locomotives, and the name Soc Line painted on. Only the letters W.C. remain on the locomotives, to indicate the proudly independent little railroad, born in Menasha, that once bore the title. Wisconsin Central.

Milwaukee Saw First Locomotive in State

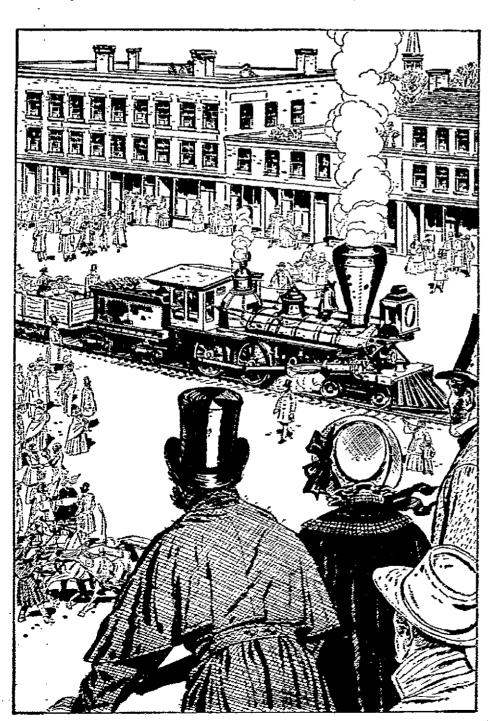

Although the Wisconsin Central railway system was the first to open up the great north woods to passenger and freight service, it was by no means the first railroad to operate in Wisconsin. That distinction belongs to the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad Co.—predecessor to the Milwaukee Road—which in 1850 inaugurated rail traffic in Wisconsin by running a locomotive and two freight cars between Milwaukee and Wauwatosa, a distance of about five miles, in only 12 minutes.

It was a gala day, that 20th of November, 1850, when Solomon Juneau, Milwaukee's first citizen, and Byron Kilbourn, a former mayor and president of the fledgling railroad, boarded train No. 1 at the tiny Milwaukee and Mississippi depot. Their silk hats and Sunday finery contrasted strikingly with the open freight cars in which they were seated. That the trip was swift and uneventful was a tribute to the railroad's management, and Philadelphia's Norris Works, which built the 43-foot locomotive.

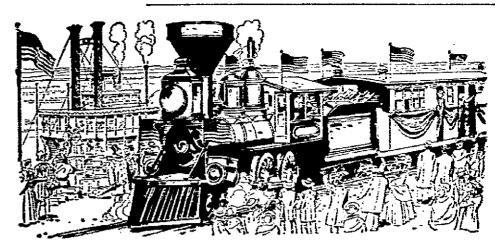

Bustling Community

Milwaukee at that time was a city of 21,000, a bustling community proud of its six flouring mills and an equal number of hotels. The state itself boasted of about 305,000 residents, one-third of whom were foreign born. The nation's total population, including Indians, was 23 million—a figure soon to be increased as immigrants rode the railways into as yet undeveloped territories.

The original charter of the Milwaukee and Mississippi called for construction of a 20-mile line, between Milwaukee and Waukesha, and on Feb. 26, 1851, the first trip was made between these two cities. The train covered the distance of 20 miles at a brisk 25 m.p.h., accommodating 250 passengers in what one observer termed "neat and comfortable cars."

Wisconsin's first railroad train was operated in Milwaukee Nov. 20, 1850, by the Milwaukee & Mississippi, predecessor to the Milwaukee Road. (Drawings and background material from "Four Generations on the Line," centennial publication of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Co.)

But the demand for rail transportation—particularly for movement of agricultural produce that could not be sold locally—could not be satisfied with a mere 20 miles of track. Accordingly, on May 25, 1854, the first Milwaukee and Mississippi passenger train pulled in at Madison. Brass bands, gaily-attired fire companies, members of the clergy, editors, reporters and representatives of the many civic bodies were on hand to greet the steam locomotive when it arrived from Milwaukee at 2 p.m.

A similar triumph, this time in another direction, was celebrated April 20, 1857, when the first train arrived at Prairie du Chien, on the banks of the Mississippi. At 5 p.m. a locomotive, three passenger cars and a baggage car reached the Mississippi, and the shriek of its whistle was greeted by a blast from a steamboat, then landing at Prairie du Chien.

Flags, Bunting

Colorfully decorated with flags and bunting, the train halted at the Father of Waters, and an eight-gallon keg of Lake Michigan water was emptied into the Mississippi at this point to commemorate the joining of the railroad and the great inland waterway.

Within 10 years of its founding, however, the Wisconsin and Mississippi was in grave financial trouble. First Byron Kilbourn was replaced by John Catlin as president of the line. Then, May 24, 1860, the railroad defaulted on all its mortgages and went into receivership.

Early the following year a group of financiers, including several Easterners, bought the Milwaukee and Mississippi for $7.5 million and changed its name to Milwaukee and Prairie du Chica Railway. Many citizens of Wisconsin were upset by the new management's stipulation that a majority of the directors "shall be citizens of New York."

The Milwaukee and Prairie du Chien made a significant move forward on June 14, 1866, when Alexander Mitchell, a Wisconsin businessman, was elected President. By taking charge of the firm, Mitchell brought the line under the same management as the Milwaukee and St. Paul. The company promptly acquired a number of short lines, and by 1867 was operating a through route from Milwaukee to St. Paul and Minneapolis, via Prairie du Chien. Service was also extended to Chicago, by way of connecting routes.

Chicago Service

On May 20, 1873, the company opened service over its own line between Milwaukee and Chicago, and in 1874 became the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad.

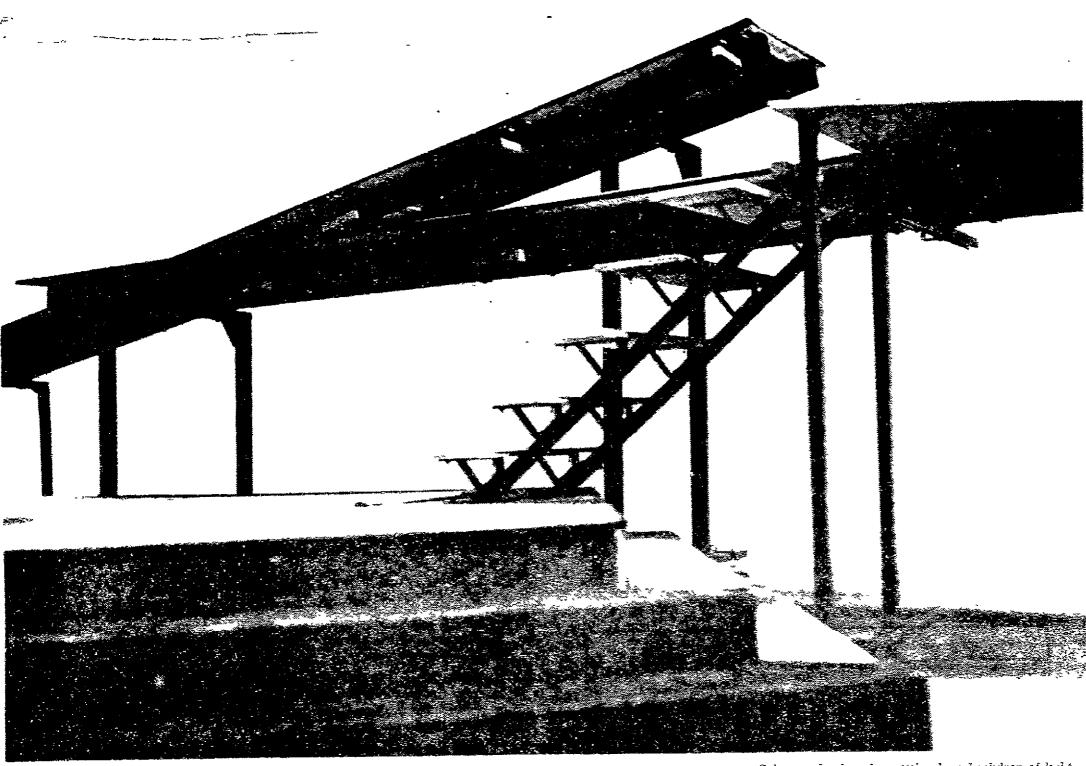

The next decade was one of rapid expansion. By December, 1693, rails had been pushed from Eau Claire, Wis., to Chippewa Fails, and from Cedar Rapids to Ottumwa, Ia. In Dakota, the rails were extended 81 miles to make a continuous line in the James River valley from Yankton northward by way of Mitchell, through Aberdeen to Ellendale, a distance of 250 miles.

A fast mail train, between Minneapolis-St. Paul and Chicago, went into service in 1884, and on Jan. 4, 1903, the line inaugurated service from Chicago to San Francisco and Denver, using rails of Union Pacific from Omaha to Denver and Ogden, Utah, and the Southern Pacific on to San Francisco.

The name of the line, which had remained the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul for more than half a century, was shortened to The Milwaukee Road following a reorganization in 1928. And in 1932 the firm cast aside another reminder of its pioneering past when it abandoned the only narrow-gauge line in the system, a 35-mile stretch from Bellevue, Iowa, to Cascade, Iowa.

On May 29, 1935. The Milwaukee Road opened a new era of speed and luxury for its patrons when the first Hiawatha, a streamlined train designed by Milwaukee Road engineers and built by the line's own craftsmen, went into service. In 1950 the line observed its centennial year.

Starting in Milwaukee, and hearing the name of the state's largest city across half a nation, it had grown from a small, local enterprise to a major industry, covering 11,000 route miles and employing some 35,000 persons.

Macbeth's Backstage Projects Spill Onto Lawrence Campus

BY DON VORPAHL

Theatinal locatics are in for a stern test in the coming work as the Lawrence College Theatre's epochal production of Shake-peare's "Macketh" is unfinited in the slage of Starsbury Theatre at the Lawrence View Drama Center

Director F. Threships cleak has assembled a gigantic all-collections for the task of organizing, designing and discount the menumental Elizabethan tragesty. The effect is a study in supply, factors and chain-ofcommand that would do an army proud.

Chak's concert of "Macheth" in our day is a concept of creds on of exposure. He hopes to present the basic man in start, stelleral form to reveal his inner self, his lose this forebooks his fear.

Similarly clock has patterned his decicus, sets and commons so hat dry granule a financial R on which to reveal the committee both."

Exciting Challenge

Pecause this a searching of a departure from the traditional period setting of the play, the locistics of the Laurence Theatre's coming production pose one of the most excurng challength the group has accepted during Clook's 34-year term at the college.

The Lawrence professor of theatre and drama gathered some of his heutenants to review their task as early as last spring. Problems of design went to Joseph Hopfensperger, an assistant professor in the department. Another assistant professor. Dr. David Mayer, III, took charge of the play's special arrangements. Dr. William Schutte, professor of English, acted as Cloak's basson officer in scholarly matters.

Two more facilitians were added in the fall. Mrs. Jack Glasner, an alumna, accepted the position of costume-designer, and Laurence student Ralph Schuetz Jr., was named stage-manager. Each soon was engaged, like his compatricts, in research, sketching and annotating his part in the production.

Cleak, with scholarly assists from Dr. Schutte, retired his image of the play until it was ready to be set by the other four assistants.

Hopfersperger's design would use a bread central acting area of step-units with a skel-tal ramp of steel construction extending over it. His hope was to lend compliant to the agures of the actors without intruding upon them visually. An unit operated channeled-steel complications remainsment. It also proved itself a useful temperature addition to the designer's assenal of construction reglements, going beyond the theatie's traditional world fabric and glue.

A cyclerama or color elections would add just the essential scame out Heptonsperger words, and would enable him to make lightning transitions among the phylic 28 multiproperties sents. The young designer developed a notel system of projection using "follow-spots" with over-laid sheet aluminum "etch-ings". The system, so far as can be determined, is unknown to the legitimate stage.

Armor Construction

Dr. Mayer set himself to the little-known craft of armer construction. Using fabrics with a pliable epray-on bond. Mayer turned out an amazing likeness of body and head armor. A battalion of campus knitters, including hastily enlisted young males, worked feverishly at a chain-mail simulation created of heavy string and sprayed with aluminum paint.

Mis. Glasner created a wardrobe around a basic sulitary tunic with a Scottish flavor. Her guiding distorn was "let the actor wear the costume, not viceversa." The tunic, when trimmed with a wide variety of accessories, would permit rapid changes while giving distinctive flavors to messengers, murderers, soldiers and royalty. Bold colors would match Cloak's concept of starkness and simplicity.

Schuetz developed a notebook of cues and commands to his crew of 40 and to Cloak's cast of 35. The need for the proper light at the proper moment, the hurried dash to the make-up room or to an opposite wing would require split-second timing. The crew and cast would have to work smoothly.

And beyond all these scenes came the supporting eren, there involved in properties, music, ducling techniques, make-up, publicity, promotion, art and general shopwork. Cleak recently estimated their number at around 150, this making a total of nearly one seeth of the Lowrence student body directly conceaned with "Marbeth."

The legible's seem great. But in this 400th year after Shake phase's buth a play so strong, so timeless, descrees them.

Television Miracle!

BY CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) - On a chill winter's night in 1950, a CES newscaster-turned-entertainer uttered for the first time what has since become a famous

"Will our first contestant enter and sign in, please"

It was the evening of Feb. 2, and the premiere show of that refevision institution, "What's My Line?"

The speaker was John Daly, and over the past 14 years, he has repeated, with minor variations, the same phrase more than 2.800 times in the course of some 700 programs.

In a department of show business in which a twoyear-old program is considered good and three years great. 14 seasons is a television miracle. "What's My Line" shares longevity honors with only one other program, the Ed Sullivan Show that started about a year earlier.

The Sullivan show, however, has gone through many changes. Just about the only real, basic change that has occurred on "What's My Line?" has been in the composition of the panel itself.

Anchor Man

Daly, of course, has been host and anchor man through the years and has missed only four performances during the entire period. Columnist Dorothy Kilgallen sat on the first panel and is still one of the vital ingredients of the program's continuing success. Arlene Francis, the other woman "regular," joined the show for its second performance. Publisher Bennett Cerf was added in May, 1951.

For the first six years, the four panelists were "regulars." Now the fourth chair is reserved for guests on the theory that a combination of new faces and the regulars give the program its apparently perennial appeal.

Steve Allen was a permanent panelist for over a year between 1955 and 1956, alternating with Fred Allen, who stayed until his death.

Gil Fates, executive producer who has been with the show for 13 years, points out that the program new has contestants whose lines didn't even exist when it was born-an airman who spent seven days in a space chamber, the executive officer of an atomic submarine, a rock and roll composer, the head of

At Pomired Preparatory School, Putnam. Conn. he had roles in "Guys and Dolls" and "Mr Roberts."

Many Talents

PK deesn't spread his talents thin. He's considered by many telk music tans on the Lawrence compus as the school's timest minstrel, and has appeared in a number of local tolk song concerts and on Fex Valley radio. He also is a staff announcer on the rame version of Marshall Granros' VIEW folk music column. 'The Feople Sing," aired on WAPL.

His musical virtuesity is concentrated mostly on vocals, self-accompanied in the six-string guitar. But he also has done some work on the 12-string guitar and tive-string ranic. In his music, P.K.'s theatrical tendencies show through. Rather than singing felk music for "its sound" or because it's popular, he sings for "the pure enjoyment of expression."

astronaut John Glenn's launch team and a director of the Peace Corps, among others.

"We've also had as contestants youngsters who were not even born when the program started." he

Among them were a batboy for the New York Mets and an 8-year-old orchestra conductor.

For about the first five years, the show barred return engagements of its "mystery guests."

"We try for people who are so well known that the audience recognizes them on sight." Fates says. "And we learned that there just were not enough of them so we let some return from time to time."

Mystery Guests

Close to 700 mystery guests have appeared on the program, a veritable "Who's Who" of celebrities including Elizabeth Taylor and Sister Elizabeth Kenny, the Lone Ranger and Noel Coward. Schiaparelli and Gypsy Rose Lee, the Maguire Sisters and the Harlem

"Early in the show's history, we had a bit of trouble with double entendre's," recalls John Daly, "That was the reason we evolved the business of my pulling at my left ear to warn the panel away from a dangerous area. But I haven't reached for my ear in years

A listing of the contestants' lines (which occupies nine pages of single-space typewriting) suggests that during the first years of the program there was a deliberate effort to be mildly shocking. Contestants represented just about every phase of the diaper, girdle and lingerie business. In a short period two people concerned with fun-house skirt-blowing machines turned up on the show.

Among the more unusual occupations unveiled by the program have been a seller of paper panties for lamb chops, a jelly bean polisher, a mustache wax wrapper, a boxing glove stuffer, a painter of dots on dice, a manufacturer of nose warmers, a baseball stitcher, a mistletoe salesman and a breeder of flies.

"The audiences have become a bit more sophisticated." Fates concedes. "They just don't seem to be so amused by diapers and artist's models any more."

Daly attributes the longevity of the show partly to the personal characteristics of the panel-Miss Kilgallen, the play-to-win gamester; Miss Francis, the carefree and amusing player: Cerf. the neighborly fellow with an affection for terrible puns.

"It's a good working relationship." Daly says. "A lct of the people seem to think that we all get together socially during the rest of the week. Actually, we rarely see each other except at show time.

Fresh Relationship

"The women get to the studio an hour or so ahead of air time for make up, and the men usually show up about 25 minutes before the show. That way it stays a nice fresh relationship."

Daly says that over the years, the show has provided him with the equivalent of AB, MA and Ph.D degrees.

"If ever I-or anyone-makes any error on the Daly insists that his weekly presence on the show does not tie him down to one spot. He has had several close calls when trying to make the studio on time. On one occasion he had four minutes to spare when his plane from Europe had to land in Boston instead of New York. Another time he had only three minutes to spare when a blinding snow storm turned his auto trip from suburban Westchester to New York into a slalom race against time.

Golden Gate City is Synonym for Glamour

BY EDWARD COLLIER

SAN FRANCISCO-Pick out any adjective that is a synonym for enchanting, glamorous, exciting or colorful-and it will fit this city attached to the Golden

The great orange bridge, the world's largest single center span-which connects cosmopolitan San Francisco with the rugged northern redwood country -has become one of the world's most fabled and photographed landmarks. It is an appropriate starting point for a Magic Circle auto jaunt, planned first to cover the peninsula that stretches south from San Francisco.

From the big bridge, Lincoln Boulevard skirts through Presidio Military Reservation, established by Spain in 1776, now distinguished for its wooded beauty, gun emplacements, dirigible hangar, and ocean vistas: and Lincoln Park, known for its Palace of the Legion of Honor. The Palace, one of the city's three excellent art museums, is a treasure house of tapestries, paintings, and Robin bronzes and marbles.

Time-Tested Attractions

Just outside the park are two time-tested attractions for visitor and native alike-Cliff House and the Seal Rocks. On a clear day there are sweeping panoramas of the blue Pacific, but the never-failing lure in February and March is the seals who sun and cavort on the rocks. Cliff House is a venerable dining and Sunday brunch spot.

The landscaped way south (Great Highway) crosses the western end of Golden Gate Park, whose 1.000 plus acres hold wooded dells and drives, a Municipal Golf Course, lakes, bridle paths, two sports stadiums, Japanese Tea Garden, and Strybing Arboretum's rare and exotic plants. Currently in the park's spotlight is the newly reopened Steinhart Aquarium with its strikingly designed and lighted glass display tanks; the star performers are two goodnatured, seven-foot dolphins. A few blocks on south more of the animal world can be seen at Fleishacker Zoological Gardens.

At Lake Merced you turn off briefly on Skyline Boulevard, which soon meets the coastal highway (Calif. 1)—the route followed in 1769 by Spanish Captain de Portola's expedition which led to the discovery of San Francisco Bay. On these rocky headlands morning mists from the Pacific drift between the primitive hills. Tiny coves and white beaches notch the dimpled coastline.

Spanish Ancestry

California's Spanish ancestry is underlined at Sanchez Adobe on Rancho San Pedro, near Rockaway Beach. Now preserved by the county as a museum, this ranch house was built in 1842-46 on a royal grant of 8.900 acres. The twostory structure's adobe bricks, made of mud and straw, are circled with wooden balconies.

The eternal loneliness of this coastline route is evident at Half Moon Bay, an inlet that was envisioned as another Atlantic City at the turn of the century. Today it is still a hollow expanse of beach in a sparsely populated area; here begins the sweep of secluded sand beaches stretching southward, linked only by the coastal highway.

Natural Bridges State Park has some of the most photogenic sea statuary in California. The semi-circular beach-popular with picnickers, artists and sun bathers—is sheltered by two wind and surf-sculptured sandstone arches. A hidden beach cove can be reached by wading through one of the graceful tunnels.

Redwood Majesty

Time should be alloted for a five-mile side trip to Henry Cowell Redwoods State Park, where you can take a self-guiding trail among the giants. The path leads by the General Fremont Tree, in whose hollow base legend says that the famed explorer-soldier once camped in 1846 when he was a young lieutenant. The Three Twisters, a massive stand, have spiraling bark; the General Grant Tree is 252 feet high and 42 feet in circumference: the Wonder Tree has made up for a fire-gutted old base with a new down-growing bark skirt.

Three of the romantic old covered bridges in the area still stand. Felton Bridge is a mile past Colwell Redwoods Park, while another is preserved in Santa Cruz's Paradise Park.

The continuing route (Calif. 1) is via Capitola, setting for the National Begonia Festival. Thousands of the vari-colored blossoms-accompanied by pretty girls-decorate marine floats on the placid water of Soquel Creek. In summer and early fall the hillside gardens of the town are a riot of color.

Here starts another series of state parks popular with swimmers and fishermen: at Capitola and New Brighten Beaches stands of pine run to the plateau's gnawed-out edge, leaving sand enclaves and panoramic ocean overlooks. Scores of determined diggers hunt the clusive pismo clam, while the abundant birdlife lures the ornithologists.

Seacliff Beach State Park on Monterey Bay is another flawless sandbox for kiddies of all ages—one million played there last year. It also has a unique piece of antique sea furniture, a World War I concrete ship which was towed here for recreational purposes. Now broken in half, anglers use part of the craft for surfcasting for steelhead, salmon, perch, flounder, sole, and halibut.

From Watsonville the Magic Circle route turns north through the rich agri-

Colorful San Francisco, famed for its Chinatown, cable cars, night life and majestic Golden Gate Bridge, is starting point for a Magic Circle auto jaunt that follows the dromatic coastline down the peninsula. Highlights: Sanchez Adobe, a ronch house restored as it was in Spanish colonial days: a bevy of beach parks for fishing, clamming, sunbathing; surf-carved Natural Bridges State Pork; Sonta Cruz and its varied attractions, including fine beaches, a replica of the old Spanish mission, romantic covered bridges: Los Gatos and its statues of wildcats; wineries to visit at Saratoga; and a visit to the beoutiful 5,000 acre campus of Stanford University at Palo Alto. There is a side trip across the bridge to quaint Savsalito, perched on cliff overlooking the bay, and Muir Woods National Monument where stands of giant redwood have been preserved.

cultural Valley of Pajaro and then climbs up Hecker Pass. Vineyard and winery country starts around Los Gatos, named after the wildcats that once were numerous in the area. Two heroic-size statues of these felines, created by sculptor Robert Paine, stand at the entrance to Poet's Canyon.

Visiting a winery and its cellars is a fascinating first-time experience-and several in the area are open to the public. We stopped at the Paul Masson Winery in Saratoga for an interesting half-hour tour to see the champagne aging room and the steps taken in producing some 25 different kinds of wine. After the tour we had "samples" in the tasting room.

Valley of Blossoms

From early February through April this Santa Clara Valley is fragrantly beautiful with orchards of blooming almond, apricot, pear, cherry and prune

From Saratoga it is only a half-hour ride, via Calif. 9 and U. S. 101-"El Camio Real" (King's Highway) of Spanish colonial days, to Palo Alto, home of world-renowned Stanford University. Lush Palm Drive leads from the highway into the heart of the campus.

Best place to start your Stanford visit is at Hoover Tower, the 285-foot reddomed landmark which houses the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, a tribute to the former U. S. President, an alumnus and trustee. The observation level, with its 35-bell carillon from Belgium, commands a magnificent view of the 5,000-acre campus. The red tiled roofs of the University's Mediterranean-style buildings are corrugated by open quads, portals, winding walks and tropical planting.

New buildings on the expansive campus are a modern projection of Spanish architecture. The 56-acre Stanford Medical Center's structures are connected by arcades and marked by long roof overhangs, patterned columns, latticed partitions.

From Palo Alto the Magic Circle route (U. S. 101) leads back into San Francisco. It's often downright chilly in the Golden Gale City, and there's a gray fog on summer mornings. But visitor and resident alike affectionately call it the most colorful metropolis in America, perhaps because it offers all things to all people.

February is a delightful time of year in San Francisco; quick little friendly showers bring out the beauty and scent of the big open outdoor flower stands that grace busy downtown street corners.

BY JACK RUDOLPH OPERA-BIZET

"Carmea" (complete), with Regina Reznik, Mario del Moraco, Joan Sutherland and Tom Krause; Orchestra de la Suisse Romande and Chorus of the Grand Thrater, Geneca, conducted by Thomas Schippers, London OLA 1268 (Monavial OL 4368) Six sules.

London has set the stage for a knock-down argument between two opposing schools of operatic thought with this carefully made recording of Bizet's lusty masterpiece. Those who contend that opera is important only for its music will be delighted. The faction that insists on opera being drama as well as music, however, will be unhayy.

Musically, this is a masterfully prepared, performed and engineered album. It has a top flight tast of international singing stars, a conductor of high reputation and one of Europe's finest symphony orchestras. In addition, both the sound engineering and the accompanying brechure are all that could be wished.

Musical Values

With such a start, the performance was a cinch to offer high musical values and it does. As a concert version it is outstanding.

Dramatically, however, it is a different story, "Carmen" is, or can be (should be, if you belong to the second school) one of the most dramatically exciting of all operas, a tragedy of immense passion and mounting tension. The album misses on nearly every count. For all its beautiful music, this "Carmen" is pretty tepid theater.

As Carmen. Miss Reznik sings impeccably but as a character she is far too ladylike for the amoral tramp Bizet created. Only on rare occasions, notably toward the climax, does her characterization begin to match her vocalizing. By then it is a bit late.

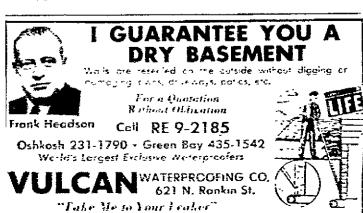

Mario del Monaco tries hard to light a fuse and is generally a strong Jose, but he gets little dramatic assistance. Most of his help comes from Tom Krause as Escamillo and Roberto Geay as Zuniga, especially the latter.

Pleasant Dividend

A pleasant and unusual dividend is the appearance of Joan Sutherland as Micaela. It is one of the indices of Miss Sutherland's artistic greatness that she is as willing to sing a minor role as a big one, and she lavishes as much care on that of Micaela as on Lucia or Violetta.

The Swiss Orchestra performs with great sensitivity under the baton of Thomas Schippers cloaned by Columbia for the recording, but Schippers is the real villain of the piece. He holds the entire production to a muted pace that robs it of necessary impact. Every time the performance begins to build. Schippers clamps the lid back on—principally by slowing the erchestral cues to a crawl.

To repeat—if you're ready to settle for the music alone, you'll enjoy this album thoroughly. If it's blood and thunder you want, this "Carmen" will disappoint.

Railroad History

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Post-Crescent Slaft Writer

More than the Conestoga, the Pony Express, the Winchester repeater or the Colt six-gun... the manmade creation that "won the West" was the smoke-belching monster Indians called the Iron Horse.

In the Fox River Valley early day transportation involved boats and canoes more frequently than overland methods. It was not until the railroad era in Wisconsin that moving passengers and pay loads by water routes diminished.

Our stamp illustration, a 1944 commemorative noting the 75th anniversary of the first transcontinental railway in North America, is a reproduction of "Golden Spike Ceremony"—a painting by John McQuarrie.

Dramatic Scene

The scene was perhaps more dramatic than the initial run of other new rail installations, but it is symbolic of the impact railroads had on national development.

In Wisconsin railways quite naturally affected the southeast and southern portions of the state first. Clinton, in Rock County, migrated to the railroad junction when the Chicago & Fond du Lac (now part of Chicago & Northwestern) reached the community in 1856. Identity of two early communities. Clinton and Summerville, became merged in what is known today as Clinton Junction as a result.

This was just one result of the railroad's coming. The mails, previously carried by stage, were transported by rail. Stage lines disappeared. The Summerville post office was closed because it had been dependent on the stage for liaison.

Postal history research helps unravel the web of community name changes, discontinued post effices as early optimism in a town's future faded with economic change—and the effects of railroad locations and developments changed people's minds about where to live.

The Wisconsin & Superior Railroad, which opened from Fond du Lac to Oshkosh Oct. 13, 1859, and then to Neenah-Menasha in 1860, to Appleton, 1861 and to Green Bay, Nov. 13, 1862 (according to Wisconsin Postal History references) no doubt had its effect in community change.

Community Identities

And the various changes which occurred in early Wisconsin make it quite involved, though interesting to the lover of history, to keep up with a community's various identities.

Kaukauna, for example, was among the first 12 in Wisconsin to have its own post office, in 1831. Green Bay, incidentally, was first in 1822, But the Fox City community was earlier known as Van Cakalin, Michigan Territory. Then it was called Statesburg while the Stockbridge Indians were strong there. Later, in 1878, it was called Ledyard and became South Kaukauna in 1883.

Noting its identity with early railroading in Wisconsin. Fond du Lac citizens have been seeking support for a commemorative stamp noting that the C & NW railway used its Fond du Lac shops, in 1864, for building the first official permanent railway mail cars.

Artificial Trail-Laying Often Helpful in Training Hound

BY BUD LARIMER

With all of the trailing hounds, we will here concentrate primarily on the merry little Beagle, which, given plenty of natural hunting as a young dog, will eventually pick up and learn to handle most of the tricks and quirks of the wild game. This is especially true if the young dog hunts consistently with an older and thoroughly experienced dog. But you must be careful to see that he does not just "lean" on this older dog, but really assimilates the trailing knowledge that he is experiencing.

For top-notch hunting, Beagle packs and high quality field trial work, many top authorities feel that fewer trailing faults and more rapid progress by the young animal are achieved by artificial trail-training, especially in the beginning months.

This is done with artificial trail-laying and working with the dog on leash. A small bag of saw-dust is saturated with the scent and dragged some hundred yards or so. Lead the pup up to the beginning of the scent and encourage him to "open up." At all times you are able to know when he gets off the real trail, "putters" too much or tries to back-track. When he does a good job and follows this track to the end praise and reward lavishly.

Lengthen Trails

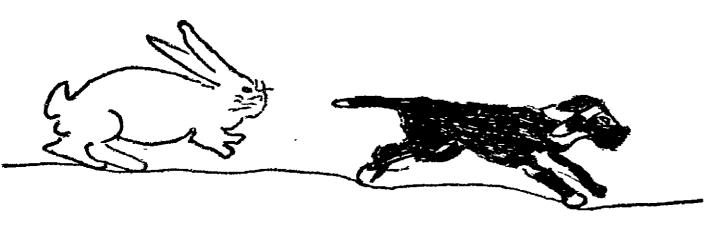

Gradually lengthen these drag trails and make the ground covered more difficult. When he seems to do his job with dispatch, remove the lead and make his trail more and more difficult, with plenty of brush, brambles and swamp. This "breaking-in" generally demands about two months. At all times during this period you are able to know when he's "off the line" and can take corrective action.

Lest this phase palls upon your "student" you can now introduce live game. A tame, or semi-tame, rabbit is ideal. Let these "trials" be within a securely enclosed area.

Show bunny to the dog and let him sniff it over.

Garden Diary

Flower Catalog Useful Text Book

BY UNCLE JACK

This is the season for the little extravagances that the gardener indulges, as I suppose all other hobbyists do. I have ordered some new tools that I have not heretofore thought were strictly needed, but which I have coveted for a long time, nevertheless. One of them is a long handled, etxension-type pruner with which I hope to reach into the upper branches of my fruit trees without the hazardous use of ladders.

It eost a little more than I had hoped, but we are handy with rationalizations, in this brotherhood of the backyard. Surely I can produce a few more bushels of apples and other fruits during succeeding seasons to recover this investment?

古 亡 亡

The garden catalogs have provided some hours of pleasant browsing during the last few months. The French have a phrase that describes them. Translated, it means roughly "always new, and always the same."

Catalog Charge

I have noticed that the best of the catalog publishers now impose a slight charge for their annual editions. It may be that they are aware that there are more persons like your avuncular correspondent every year.

We pore over the catalogs to discover the new varieties, and then search for them in our local markets and among our local nurserymen. For many amateurs, the garden catalog has become a kind of text-book and the best of them are more effective in instruction than are some of the standard texts on the library shelves. They are written by men and women accustomed to the art of communication, which some of the professional horticulturists plainly

+ + **+

The notebook has accumulated a long list of suggested flower, shrub and bulb acquisitions for the new season. I hesitate to tot up the dollar cost.

In the end, as always. I will halve the budget for reasons of financial necessity. Yet it is not entirely a matter of regret. There should be something remaining on the list to provide the impetus for dreaming and planning next winter—even as some politicians carefully hoard campaign issues for the next election year.

Our neighborhood is worried about the possibility of drought conditions during the new growing season this year. We had a near-drought season last year, a dry autumn, and thus far very far from normal winter snowfall. It may be that our home-made auxiliary irrigation system will get a hard work-out this summer.

AAA CEBBB* $8. C. 5

With the dog out of sight, release the rabbit and give it a start. Then bring on that hound and encourage him to trail. If unenthused or confused, an older dog will soon excite him to keenness. Make these "meets" short so that his interest is fresh, and work thus for a week or so. See that you are close enough at the "kill" to rescue the rabbit and save him for future neophytes.

About at this point the young hound should be faunched on wild game and given experience unlimited and encouragement in acquiring all the important "tricks of his trade." Here again a slow-goer or a timid one may be fired by enthusiasm if worked with an older dog. From now on it is up to the hound and depends upon whether he "has it" or not, and up to you to make his hunting opportunities wide, varied and consistent.

Whistle Signal

During these early training days is also the time to establish most firmly some word or whistle signal that will bring your hound or hounds back in to you, and to follow back home at heel. Control seems to be maintained better if you take your dog, brace or pack to and from the field leashed. There are few things more infuriating than to stand out for hours in cold or rain trying to bellow or "blow in" a bunch of these head-strong little huntsmen.

Even more maddening is to have one or more of them pass you on one of their "circles." close enough for you to touch, pay not the slightest heed to your purple-faced command, and keep doing right on over the horizon.

We understand through Mr. John Birr of Neenah that a number of local Beagle enthusiasts are eager to form a little club and work diligently toward holding field trials, as well as eventual ownership or leasing of suitable grounds for such trials. This would be a fine and beneficial project, especially for the many eager young sportsmen, and should certainly merit community support and the active co-operation of the local conservation and sportsmen's clubs. Keep us posted, John, good luck, and we will give you every boost possible.

Nollan, a Twin City resident since 1931, has spent 17 years building and perfecting this extensive system, which includes 700 feet of track: 40 engines, 165 freight cars: 40 passenger cars, and 75 switches. 80 per cent of which are electrically operated Nellan's system is in HO gauge, which means that the equipment and scenery is built to a scale of oneeighth of an inch to one foot. Nollan builds most of his locometries and rolling stock from kits, which he "improves" by installing such refinements as back-up lights that go on when the locomotive is in reverse.

Incorporated in the scenery are stones that Nollan has collected in his travels to some 40 of the United States and additional stones sent him from foreign lands by his son, who is with the U.S. Navy.

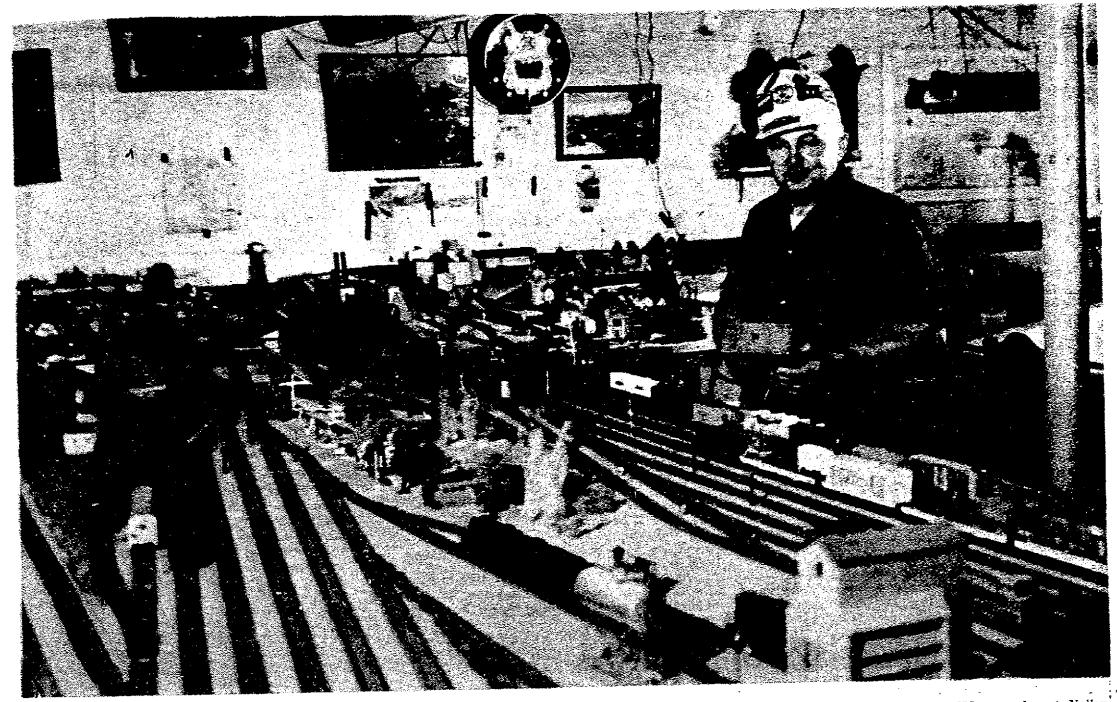

"Nutco." incidentally, stands for "The Neenah Union Transi: Co." In his spare time Nollan is a member of an informal club, consisting of fellow model railreaders, which meets in members' homes every two weeks.

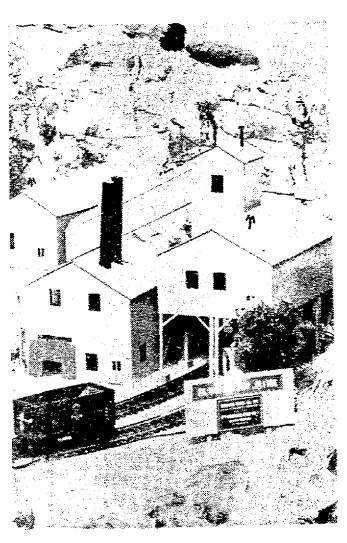

Of the 75 switches on the "Nutco Line," 86 per cent are electrically operated. The owner, Walter Nollan. built mest of the rolling stock himself from kobby kits (Posi-Crescent Color Photo by Robert Vander ealker)

Non-Fiction Makes Strong Bid For Attention of U.S. Readers

BY MILES A. SMITH

NEW YORK (AP)—Nonfiction will make a strong bid for readers' attention this spring. But if your taste runs to fiction, there will be some promising volumes coming your way too.

Between now and the end of May the new titles in nonfiction will run heavily toward public affairs. The current interest in books related to Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson, as reported earlier, will carry well into the spring months.

One famous fiction writer, Ernest Hemingway, will be represented posthumously in the nonfiction field by "A Moveable Feast," a series of sketches about people and places in Paris of the 1920s, to be published May 5 by Scribner's.

Fine Prospects

The novels will come from such established writers as Edwin O'Connor. William Golding, Elizabeth Janeway, Storm Jameson, Robert Penn Warren, Gore Vidal and the team of Fletcher Knebel and Charles W. Bailey IL.

Taking the nonfiction first, here are some of the prospects:

Gene Smith's "When the Cheering Stopped" (Morrow) leads off the March parade; it is the story of Woodrow Wilson's last year and a half of life. Polister George Gallup has some suggestions for achieving social progress in "The Miracle Ahead" (Harper).

Lincoln and Alice Day treat the subject of population increase in "Too Many Americans" (Houghton, Mifflin). Ladislas Farago writes about "Patton," the American general (Obolensky) and William J. A. Carr describes a whole family dynasty in "The du-Ponts of Delaware" (Dodd, Mead).

Stanley Loomis' "Paris in the Terror" (Lippincott) is a bit of history, covering the period from June 1793 to July 1794.

Social investigator Vance Packard's new book covers the theme of the invasion of privacy by hordes of snoopers in "The Naked Society" (McKay) and a book in the same general area will be "The Private Invaders" by Myron Brenton (Coward-McCann).

April's nonfiction will get under way with "Public and Private Dallas," a study of a city by Warren Leslie (Grossman). Pierre van Paassen, whose "Days of Our Years" was a best seller 25 years ago, has written a sequel, "To Number Our Days" (Scribner's).

Besides Hemingway's book, the nonfiction in May will include Sen. Joseph S. Clark's outspoken "Congress, the Sapless Branch" (Harper). And Ian Fleming, who usually writes about the dashing secret agent James Bond, will describe 15 of the world's most enticing cities in "Thrilling Cities" (New American Library).

Fiction Highlights

Now for the fiction highlights of the spring:

Arona McHugh, in "A Banner With a Strange Device" (Doubleday) has written a story set in Boston, about a group of young people in the 1940s.

Dashing Steamboatman Is Hero Of Exciting Civil War Novel

Run Me a River. By Janice Holt Giles. Houghton Mifflin. $4.95.

What is there about the old riverboat days that makes them so romantic and exciting? They seem to embody the spirit of adventure.

Mrs. Giles' novel is not about Twain's Mississippi, but Kentucky's Green River, from the bead of navigation near Bowling Green, northward to the Ohio River near Evansville, Ind.

The "Rambler" was a little 90-ton stern-wheeler that young Bo Cartwright had managed to acquire on mortgage. With the help of his crusty friend Foss. the engineer who nursed its clanking engine, Cartwright made freight runs on the Green, hauling merchandise and livestock. His ambition was to earn enough to get a big steamboat. But there was a war

The time was September of 1861, and the "Rambler" was upriver when word came that Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner. C.S.A., had occupied Bowling Green. Downriver, there were reports of federal gunboats on their way.

Five Wild Days

So this is a narrative of five wild days in which Bo and his lattle steamboat make the run to Evansville, loading more and more cargo from frightened shappers, jumping a dam, picking up a stranded old tent showman and his pretty granddaughter—there's the love interest — skirmishing with the Confederates at a lock that was about to be blown up, dodging the federal gunboats.

Even the weather was a hazard, for you never could tell when a mizzle might turn into a real goose-drawnder.

There's homely river talk, pioneer self-reliance and rugged courage in this good old wholesome thriller: horse-pistol adventures, knuckle-down escapes and real carrying on.

Bo is a dashing steamboalman all right, the girl Phoebe is mighty valiant. Foss and the zany old actor show they can be real hardy folks when they aren't being comical.

Seems like a lot of folks should get themselves a copy of this book, shuck their shoes, scrooch up their backs toward the old wood-burning stove and settle down for a right good yarn.

Miles A. Smith

No, that isn't his guardian angel perched on the shoulder of Felir Klesmith, of Stevens Point. It's his grandson. Dennis Bungert. And Dennis is only there because of an accidental double-exposure in the camera of his mother, Mrs. Don Bungert, Menasha. The trick photo wins for Mrs. Bungert three rolls of film, which she may pick up at the Camera Exchange, Another March novel will come from Knebel and Bailey, whose "Seven Days in May" was a recent best seller. It is "Convention" (Harper) set in the near future at a Republican nominating convention.

The theme of whites and Negroes in the South is the basis of Shirley Ann Grau's "The Keepers of the House" (Knopf). Martin Caidin, a prolific writer on aviation and space subjects, has written a fictional account of an American astronaut stuck in orbit, titled "Marooned" (Dutton).

Strange Obsession

As the April fiction comes along, there will be Miss Jameson's "The Blind Heart" (Harper), a story about a character operating a fine restaurant in the South of France. Giovanni Gaureschi brings back his parish priest Don Camillo for a novel about a trip to Russia, called "Comrade Don Camillo" (Farrar, Straus).

Golding, the author of "Lord of the Flies," writes about the dean of an English cathedral who has a strange obsession, in "The Spire" (Harcourt, Brace). Warren's "Flood" (Random) is about a little Tennessee town about to be obliterated by the waters of a new dam. O'Connor has written a tale about a dashing vaudevillian of the old days, in "I Was Dancing" (Little, Brown).

The May fiction includes Miss Janeway's "Accident" (Harper), dealing with a family under stress, and Vidal's "Julian" is about Julian the Apostate (Little, Brown). Eugene Burdick, co-author of two best seilers, has written "The 480," (McGraw-Hill) the story of an election campaign. Mildred Savage's novel about a search for a remarkable drug in a medical laboratory is called "In Vivo" (Simon and Schuster).

'The King Who Dared'

Henry of Navarre. By Hesketh Pearson. Harper.

Here is "The King Who Dared." as the book's subtitle puts it.

It would take a good many adjectives—colorful, brave, lustful, humane, wise, etc.—to round out a description of this man who became King of France as Henry IV. He was born in 1553 and was assassinated by a fanatic in 1610.

Dashing Figure

Pearson is an experienced biographer who approaches his subject with affection; thus his portrayals have the warmth of life. He tells his story with wit and many a neat turn of phrase; hence he is almost as unique among biographers as his subject was among monarchs.

As a personality Henry was a pretty dashing figure. He was grave to the point of rashness in war and personal combat, and a lover with a dazzling assortment of mistresses. Living in an age when people literally lived life to the hilt, he missed few of the excitements of his age.

As a monarch he made France into a nation for the first time, by ending a whole series of civil wars between the Catholics and Protestants. Pearson also credits him with formulating a policy of alliances to offset the dominating power of the many Hapsburg rulers.

Civilized Man

He ruled and balanced the factions of his kingdom with an amazing spirit of forgiveness, and certainly had one quality missing from the royal families of Europe—a sense of humor.

Pearson presents Henry as a man far ahead of his times, thoroughly civilized in a day when this was exceptional, and an individual who would be an intelligent ornament of the modern age.

Henry of Navarre

Henry once agreed with a biographer that his own failings (particularly his weakness for women) should be set down as a lesson to his son. Pearson does even better by revealing "the failings as an integral part of this) virtues and therefore necessary to an understanding of his character."

There is a vivid portrait of a giant, in an age of Renaissance giants, in this book.

Tragic Story of Australian Expedition Told by Moorehead

Cooper's Creek. By Alan Moorehead. Harper. $5.95. The story related in this book is both true and tragic, yet the tragedy was not in vain. It is a tale of adventurous exploration, more than 100 years ago, through central Australia.

Moorehead is remembered especially for his "The White Nile" and "The Blue Nile." in which he demonstrated his extraordinary skill in lending drama, color and tension to a careful and thorough job of reporting. This time he has turned to his native land for his subject.

Odd Assemblage

The expedition set out from Melbourne, on the southeast coast, in August 1860, and the last survivor was returned to that city in the autumn of 1861.

It was an odd assemblage of men and animals the latter including 25 camels imported from India, whose keeper insisted on taking along 60 gallons of rum to be added to the creatures diet.

The leader was an Irishman named Robert O'Hara Burke. 39, who never had been an explorer, but was a district superintendent of police. William Wills, only 26, a surveyor who served as navigator, became a worthy second in command after the camel man dropped out.

Became Disaster

Burke managed to establish a base camp at Cooper's Creek, about half way to his goal. Then — although he had been warned about traveling in the furnace-like heat of the Australian summer, he set off for the Gulf of Carpenteria. 760 miles away on the north coast. He thought he could get back to the base camp in three menths. It took him much lenger, and the mischances of the return trip were staggering.

The whole adventure turned into a disaster, but it contributed to later expeditions into the unknown "ghastly blank" of interior Australia.

Moorehead is a good storyteller, with a brisk narrative style and strong descriptive powers. His book deals with a dramatic theme, and he has made the most of it.

Mother's Vivid Letters Depict Modern Africa

Astrican Creeks I Have Been Up. By Sue Spencer, David McKay Co. $3.95.

Mrs. Spencer, who moved into the Sierra Leone bush with three young sons and a mining-engineer husband, wrote many brief but interesting letters to daughters Lolly and Suzy who stayed in the U.S. in college.

The girls thought their mother's letters good enough for a book, and the girls were right.

Mrs. Spencer generally tackles one subject per letter, vividly describes it and states her reactions.

In one letter, after a trip in the Land Rover, she describes the speeding three-ton mammy wagons which carry mammies and their produce to market, the popularity of the middle of the road for driving, loading and rice drying and the use of streams along the road for bathing, clothes washing and talking politics.

Fatalistic Attitude

She describes her fury at the fatalistic attitude toward disease and applauds her cook who wears the costume jewelry and nail polish she gives him for his wife. "Civilized man is the only drab male animal in existence. His ladies have stolen his shine, but not so among Africans."

There is humor. In one letter. Mrs. Spencer mefully relates sneaking out to burn used adhesive tape and personal letters because her houseboy can't be trusted to destroy anything except the best dishes.

At first, in 1956, many of the letters end with "I have so much to learn." The last one, in 1962, concludes. "I have learned so much that I am prepared to stay here until your father retires. To live in Africa with equanimity one must follow a simple rule: Don't worry about things! Plan to be wet in the wet season and dry in the dry season and don't fight the bugs."

Bellhops Love Bumbling Joses

BY EDGAR PENTON

HOLLYWOOD—If Ben Casey and Dr. Kildare can inspire the nation's youth to careers in medicine, Bill Dana as the Park Central Hotel's Jose Jimenez, may be spawning a generation of bellhops.

At least, while Casey and Kildare may have their professional detractors, Dana is an odds-on favorite with the calling he represents.

"Bellhops love me," he says. "They even give me tips." What the tips are, he doesn't say.

Since starring as Jose in NBC-TV's Sunday night comedy, "The Bill Dana Show," Bilt has found bellhops make up one of the most consistent fan clubs.

Changed Image

No one, it seems, ever portrayed them in the lovable, sympathetic manner Bill does.

"Remember the old movie bellhops?" he asks. "They were always sneaky little guys, peering through keyholes, trying to wangle big tips and sneaking bottles of bad booze up to the room."

Bill is trying to change that image. He makes it a point to chat with bellhops in hotels and finds that. for the most part, they are dedicated young men who want to get ahead in the hotel industry.

"They never want to be manager," he reports. "For some reason, they all want to be assistant manager.

"Some of them look forward to owning their own taverns and night clubs. Hardly any want to be television stars."

To that, it could be added that Bill didn't start out to become a television star, either, much less a television bellhop.

Bill was born Bill Szathmary on Oct. 5, 1924, in Quincy, Mass. He went dutifully off to school and Emerson College and, in due time, became a comedian, a writer, a composer and Bill Dana.

Then, something happened to Bill Dana. "I was working for Steve Allen then and we were writing a sketch about a Santa Claus school in Los Angeles." he recalls, somewhat wistfully.

"All the prospective Santas were of Spanish descent and we reasoned that instead of saying 'Ho, Ho, Ho,' they would say 'Jo, Jo, Jo'."

When they couldn't find an actor to play the role.

Bill Dans, whose district characterization of "Jose Jimenez" brought him stordom and his own series, is having a ball in the latter. In it he plays Jose Jimenez as a metropolitan hotel bellhop and his biggest jons are real bellboys.

Alten asked Bill to do it. Enter Jose Jimenez. The rest is "jistory."

Now, after numerous appearances on the Steve Allen Show, hit record albums, night club dates and his own television series as Jose. Bill is nursing a case of controlled schizophrenia, characterized by the Szatbmary-Dana-Jimenez syndrome, which the Menningers wouldn't cure if they could.

Long Preparation

But all of this stepping in and out of a fictitious role hasn't thrown Dana, he's been a long time getting ready for his career in show business.

He started out as a page at NBC, New York, where he teamed up with Gene Wood, a hometown buddy and pal of Emerson College days.

They wrote their first comedy bit and, the next day, were auditioned and hired by Ed Herlihy to do a spot on a show called "Date in Manhattan."

After that, they worked on the Kate Smith and Milton Berle shows, among many others, then took their act into nightclubs.

Of those days, Bill himself writes: "We later went on the road playing the large commercial rooms and it was while nursing these bruises that I decided nite clubs weren't for me."

With Dana and Wood dissolved in a warm way, Bill became involved with the Imogene Coca Show and the Martha Raye Show, doing comedy support.

The Martha Raye Show was a turning point in his career. After a back injury put him in the hospital, his doctors advised he search out a less strenuous way of making a living.

First of his sedentary adventures was writing for a new young comic named Don Adams.

"I was delighted with the rapport Don and I had," he says of their association, "and it was this collaboration that gave me my start as a comedy writer."

When Adams appeared on the old Steve Allen Show, Bill tagged along to hear his material and Steve eventually had him "shackled with a velvet chain to a typewriter."

Talented Writer

It was the Steve Allen Show that spawned the Jose Jimenez character.

"Jose was born out of the team of Bill Daua and Don Hinkley, a lavishly talented comedy writer," Bill says, "and, over the years, he has been a source of great pleasure to me."

Particularly satisfying to Bill is the fact that Jose is looked upon as a real human being and not a character played by a performer.

"This is quite a phenomenon," he says. "Jose being considered a real person is possibly the reason for the looks of disappointment on the faces of people who stop me on the street to talk and I reply in fairly distinct English.

"At any rate, since I also consider Jose in an objective way, I dig him too."

Once Jose was established on the Steve Allen Show, Dana decided to get the character off the ground.

Fascinated by the exploits of our first astronauts, he paid them rare tribute in a comedy album titled "Jose Jimenez, the Astronaut."

Astral Prominence

Overnight, Jimenez rocketed to astral prominence, sharing the vapor trails with names like John Glenn, Scott Carpenter, Gordon Cooper and Wally Schirra. And, the astronauts loved it.

"They wanted to take me with them." Bill says, "but they wouldn't premise I'd get back and I let it go at that."

As a result of the album, Bill has become a close personal friend of all the astronauts. They exchange house visits and when he's not making people taugh, Bill can wax deadly serious about the men who ride the rockets.

VD Is Not Limited to Adults; It's a Menace to Youth, Too

BY ANN LANDERS

This is the chapter I was advised not to write. One well-intentioned friend said, "VD is a medical problem. You are not a physician. Stay away from it." Another friend warned, "The subject is too sordid—not a subject you ought to discuss. Parents will read the book and he furious with you. Why borrow trouble?"

Seventh in a Series

When someone cautioned me to "stick to emotional and social problems." I knew that the chapter was going to be written. For what is more social than gonorrhea and syphilis? I know of no better way to be of service than to give correct information on important subjects in language people can understand.

When I told a 20-year-old girl I was preparing a chapter on VD for a book addressed to teen-agers, she replied. "I didn't know teen-agers got VD. I thought it, was an adult's disease."

Medical science in recent years has discovered drugs which can eradicate venereal diseases—and quickly. There need not be even one case of VD. But obviously the answer does not lie in medication alone, All of us must be educated to understand the nature of the diseases, how they are contracted, how to recognize the symptoms and what to do when the symptoms are recognized.

Teen-agers have to be told that venereal diseases can be deadly and destructive if untreated. The subject must be taken out of the back alleys and latrines and brought into the living rooms, the lecture halls, and yes—even into the classrooms.

Now, a word to parents: If you believe VD is not an appropriate subject for teen-agers, have a statistic: Every study shows that more than 50 per cent of male VD patients became infected for the first time between the ages of 15 and 19!

Dr. Ralph W. Tyler, of the Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University, told a VD conference in Chicago, "Since 1957, there has been a sharp increase in infectious syphilis in persons under 20 years of age.

"The increase in one year—1961 over 1960—was 56 per cent." Dr. Tyler suggested that at least an additional 25 per cent of the cases were not recorded because many private physicians do not report VD. Dr. William J. Brown of the U. S. Public Health Service in Atlanta recommended that VD information should be given in the classroom. no later than the seventh grade.

Blood Test

Most states require a blood test for all couples who wish to marry. Every day I receive letters from readers who ask for a list of states which do not require a blood test. These people harbor the ridiculous idea that the condition of their blood is nobody's business but their own. Or they suspect they have VD and want to keep it a secret.

Such stupidity is criminal. A compulsory blood test may well be a nuisance, and some misguided fools may consider it an invasion of privacy; the state, however, is not remotely interested in our private affairs, but the state is properly interested in protecting unborn children.

A syphilitic father cannot pass the disease on to his child, but he can infect his wife and she can pass the disease on to her baby. A pregnant woman who has syphilis should be treated. If she does not receive treatment, her baby may be born dead, deformed, deaf, blind or paralyzed.

. Why the increase of VD when medical science has given us the drugs with which to eradicate it? Unfortunately we have become less vigilant in case-finding. Physicians and clinics have eased the drive which was in high gear 15 years ago against VD. The overconfidence produced by the miracle drugs is partly

In addition to this, sociologist tell us that children grow up faster these days. They date earlier and are tempted on all sides to sample adult pleasures. Teenagers have cars, money, leisure time and less supervision. Sex is glamorized and teen-age drinking is on the increase. Add it all up and you have the formula for Instant Trouble.

In 1943 when Dr. John Mahoney reported the successful use of penicillin in the treatment of syphilis it was hoped that this was "the answer." Within a few years it was apparent that "the answer" had hatched a new set of problems. A great many people reasoned that the miracle drugs reduced VD to an annoyance—no more dangerous than the common cold. A few shots could cure it, so why worry? Public Health support was sharply reduced because of the fantastic number of cures in the rapid treatment centers.

Every day my mail brings me dozens of leiters from teen-agers who "think they may have something" and beg me to tell them what to do. Invariably they add. "I can't tell my folks. They would die of the shock."

Here are some facts every teen-ager should know about VD:

- (1) Gonorrhea and syphilis can be erippling and even fatal if not treated.
- (2) The VD rate is always higher in the lower socio-economic groups. There is a clear correlation between VD and people who do not have equal opportunity for education, employment and social justice. But there are no racial characteristics which make one group of people more susceptible to VD than another.
- (3) VD CAN be cured. The earlier the treatment is begun the better the chances for a complete cure.
- (4) It is possible to have both gonormea and syrhilis at the same time. Having one does not irraunize against the other.
- (5) Once cured, a patient can contract the disease again if he is exposed to someone who has it.
- (6) It is NOT true that VD is passed on only one way—through sevual relations. The overwhelming majority of VD cases DO result from sexual relations with an infected person, but medical journals have recorded many exceptions.

It is extremely unlikely that VD will be caught from towels, toilet seats, contaminated drinking glasses, silverware, and so forth. But no one can say for sure that it is impossible. There are recorded cases of virgins who have contracted syphilis and gonorinea.

Doctor Infected

Dr. Robert Stolar, a dermatologist and syphilologist of Washington, D. C., reported the case of a fellow physician who contracted syphilis while performing an autopsy on the corpe of a syphilitic. The doctor accidentally tore a small hole in his rubber glove during the examination. There was an open cut on his tinger. The infection entered the bloodstream through the hole in his glove. The doctor didn't realize he had been infected until several weeks later when a sore appeared on his finger. He became suspicious when the sore did not heal after a few days. A blood test (which is called a Wasserman reaction, named after the doctor who developed the test) proved to be positive, indicating syphilis. The doctor was stunned. It required hours of searching his memory before he was able to piece together the details—the autopsy on the syphilitic, the hole in the rubber glove and the open cut on his finger.

Since the overwhelming majority of VD cases are contracted through intercourse, the surest way to protest yourself against VD is to avoid heavy necking, which so often leads to sexual relations.

As I pointed out earlier, there is a chance VD can be picked up by kissing an infected person, so I urge you to be alert. If your steady or your date has what appears to be a cold sore, don't kiss him. If you have sores in your mouth, do not kiss anyone—relative, friend or sweetheart. If the sores do not disappear within four or five days, see a doctor.

People who read about symptoms often imagine they have the disease, be it polio, TB or VD. But if you have never had sexual relations, the chances are about 1.000 to 1 that the cold sore on your lip is only a cold sore and nothing more. If, however, you have had sexual relations and you recognize a combination of the symptoms described in this chapter (and that cold sore seems stubborn about healing), don't be a fool and let fear keep you from seeking medical help. Camera Fans May Deduct Expenses From Income Tax

BY IRVING DESFOR

Camera fans, like other working members of the country, must soon file their annual financial accounting with Uncle Sam. But camera fans, unlike some other hobbvists, may be able to deduct some of their photographic expenses in figuring out their iacome

"Although photography may be primarily your hobby, costs of any work you do intending to earn o profit are deductible," according to Ken Kirkpatrick in "Income Tax Tips for Photographers" in the current March issue of Popular Photography magazine. "Your intention is the crucial point on which all deductions hang. Costs incurred in an effort to earn a profit are deductible. Costs of hobby activities, in which your purpose is personal pleasure rather than profit, are not deductible."

Most major equipment. like a camera, darkroom equipment, light meter, flash equipment, etc., can not be claimed as a full expense but must be depreciated over its percentage of business use.

The important thing in filing income tax claims is keeping full and accurate records. If you haven't the past start now for next year's tax return. Get a permanent, bound record book and label it "Photography." Set aside one section for "Income" and a larger section for "Expenses."

You'll need separate itemized sections for materials and supplies, major equipment and their depreciation values, repairs, travel expenses in making photos for possible sale and miscellaneous business expenses such as camera insurance, postage and stationery costs in mailing photos, etc.

Get receipts for money spent wherever possible. If it is a cash sales record, list the items purchased and the date. These receipts plus your cash record book will be required if you wish to consult an income tax agent for help in making out your return or it a question comes up later.

Summing it up, there are two key points for a photographer to consider for income tax purposes: 1. Did he try to make a profit from his photography? 2. Does he have complete records of his earnings and expenses? If the answers are "yes" then he can start filling in the long forms and probably save some

Wide Variety of Interesting and Valuable Minerals Found in State

If you've ever been bitten by the rock collecting bug, you know how much fon this hobby can be. There's something about prospecting for native rocks and minerals that lures you on and on in search of specimens. A rock collecting expedition is never long enough, even for the amateur on his first trip.

Although Northeastern Wisconsie may not have as many minerals of gem quality as other areas, it does have a variety of interesting rocks. You can find limestone, shale, sandstone, granite, quartzite, flint chert and syenite. The last-named rock is more familiarly known as "ruby red granite," and is found nese Wausau.

Feldspar and moonstone are also found near Wausou, and agates may be looked for in the western and northwestern parts of the state. The Upper Peninsula of Michigan is well-known for its precious and semiprecious stones, agate, jasper, thomsonite, hematité and cornelian.

Container Needed

The best way to become a rock collector is to pick all the varieties of pebbles and rock but that you can find. You will need a container to hold your specimens, and a prospector's hammer. A magnifying glass and a book on rocks will be a help too.

Pebbles and rocks can be picked up anywhere-in fields and gardens, along roadsides, in gravel pits and in gravelly road cuts. Agates, sards and carnelians are often looked for along lakes, especially after a storm when waves wash them on shore. But the largest agate I've ever found (the size of a small-to-medium potato: was picked up in a gravel pit not far from Duluth, Minn.

There are a great many books which will help you to identify your specimens, and to understand something about rocks and minerals. I picked up one of these books recently in the magazine rack on a local super market.

The book is "The Question and Answer Book of Rocks," (Golden Press, 50 cents). It is a paper back, and is just right for children, but will suit the adult beginner just fine too. It contains both black and white and colored pictures.

You may find some puzzling specimens with which you'll need help. Most museums have rack collections where you may find your answer. Some museums aiso have classes or clubs, for children and adults, in rock collecting.

Mr. Stodola's Decision

There is little new editorial comment the Post-Crescent can add to the decision this week by CAB Examiner Stodola concerning airline service to Outagamie and Winnebago Counties. The examiner's decision makes exactly the same points the Post-Crescent has outlined in many previous editorials on this subject. To repeat. they are: 1. The best service to this area would be provided by constructing a new regional airport near Neenah-Menasha: and 2. If Outagamie and Winnebago Counties cannot agree on such a joint project airline service should be provided at both the new Outagamie County airport and at Oshkosh.

Mr. Stodola also emphasizes a point we have made in the past when he says that "it is evident the Federal Government has very likely lost the opportunity of guiding the construction and improvement of a truly regional airport for the Appleton-Oshkosh area and thereby forestalling unnecessary public expenditures on airport facilities for this complex of cities."

The hearings held at Wausau last fall should have been held 10 or 20 years ago. No federal or state authority until Mr. Stodola came along ever had the intestinal fortitude to point out that the Fox Cities-Oshkosh complex should be served by one central airport. Instead the federal and state authorities continued to approve pouring of taxpayers' money into the airport at Oshkosh which any objective observer could plainly see could never be developed into a facility which could adequately serve this entire area.

torial this week lays bare the myopic thinking which prevents the people of this area getting the kind of airline service they deserve.

County to appeal Mr. Stodela's decision. The only decision acceptable to the Northwestern, as spokesman for the Oshkosh establishment, is that all airline service for this entire area should be awarded to the inadequate Oshkosh airport.

This element in Oshkosh cannot even read the Stodola decision with any longrange perspective. District Attorney Jack Steinhilber's summation was that "we're right back where we started."

We are not right back where we started. We have before us a vision of the kind of airline service this area wili need in the future. For the very first time we have a responsible Federal official laying this vision on the line.

The Outagamie County Board must have been cheered by the examiner's support of the course of action this county has taken in building a new airport. He remarked: "Although there may be differences of opinion as to whether Appleton should be served through a new regional airport or through Oshkosh, there is no dispute about the present capabilities of the existing Appleton airport... It is clear that at present the Appleton complex of communities has been handicapped in its efforts to obtain adequate air service by the inadequacy of existing airport facil-

And in conclusion, he says: "The new airport will apparently be built for general aviation purposes by Outagamie County regardless of the decision in this case."

It is obvious what we should do in this area as a result of Mr. Stodola's decision.

Winnebago and Outagamie Counties should immediately initiate joint consultations aimed at evaluating the airport needs of this area 15 or 25 years from now. We should begin to develop the means and mechanics for working together to solve these problems of the future. And the discussions should include on evaluation of the proper role that each of the county airports should play in the future in relation to a joint facility.

Somebody Will Have to Go

After six weeks of the noisiest and most childish caterwauling that we can remember in a similar situation, it has become evident that the rupture within the State Democratic party organization involving rival groups of principal men has become irreconcilable.

Senator Nelson, on the one hand, and Governor Reynolds, on the other, as champions from their public office rostrums of the two hostile factions, have the security of their offices and the prestige of their positions from which to campaign for their objectives.

Louis Hanson and Patrick J. Lucey are party organization officials, Hanson as chairman of the state committee and Lucey as Wisconsin representative on the national committee. They are responsible to the working dues-payers of the organization, and more particularly the delegates chosen to the next state convention which will be held next June.

Under the circumstances, it would appear that nothing less than a miracle will prevent a showdown on their positions and their leadership when the delegates gather for that next convention. Quite obviously, one of them will have to go, as the price for internal peace in a party machine that cannot afford the luxury of division as a hard new campaign season

No doubt the timing of this revelation of bitter divisions within a party which will ask the electorate for a mandate to rule has left many persons incredulous. Surely it cannot miss providing encouragement to the watchful Republicans who appear to have a fair chance this year to run their own campaign without the enervating frictions within that have afflicted recent item in this trade that them during recent and unsuccessful cam-

Rabinovitz Case Far From Settled

The Rabinovitz appointment to the federal bench in Wisconsin is far from a settled matter.

At a recent meeting of the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association, the ABA's committee on the federal judiciary explained for public elucidation its declaration that Rabinovitz is "not qualified" to be a federal judge.

The ABA committee works very closely with the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. When asked for an evaluation of an appointee, it generally limits its findings to whether the appointee in its opinion is "qualified" or "not qualified." In some instances the Senate committee will ask for the reasons for the opinion, and those are then given the committee in secret session, for obvious reasons.

In the Rabinovitz case, the committee was accused of opposing him because he was a Democrat and a labor lawyer. In its report to the House of Delegates, the committee commented:

"We are confident that such accusations are not warranted. Well over 90 per cent of the persons whom this committee has found to be qualified for judicial office in the last three years have belonged to the same political party (Democrat) as the individual in question and while this committee has sought to premote bipartisan or nonpartisan selection of judges, it has never, in considering the qualifications of a specified nominee, considered his political designation as bearing upon that question. There is no exception to this."

The committee also stated that a judicial nominee's counseling of labor unions had not been regarded by it "as in any way disqualifying or even as a matter to be considered in connection with its findings."

The committee made note of the fact that since July 31, 1963, the Senate has not confirmed any appointee whom the committee has not found to be qualified. And the report added: "It is to be hoped that this record may continue."

After the Senate failed to act on the original Rabinovitz appointment by President Kennedy last fall. President Johnson rushed through an interim appointment in the brief period between sessions in December. But if the Senate fails to act at this session. Rabinovitz will have to step down from the bench.

It is obvious that there must be matters of serious nature in the report the Ameri- ter-campaign for a "Square can Bar Association has made to the Senate committee. The Senate would be doing a disservice to the federal judiciary to approve the appointment under these cir-

Buster Crabs Are Fine Fare but Not as Good As Memory Recalled

BY JOHN TORINUS

I've never heard it expressed as anyone's law, but it is a truism that memorable experiences which are repeated never quite achieve their original flavor. I suppose this is because memory itself has endowed them with ethereal qualities which cannot be reproduced in actuality.

One of the repasts I have always recalled as one of my most memorable gastronomical experiences was a luncheon my wife and I enjoyed at Antoine's in New Orleans some five or six years ago. Our favorite waiter there, who went by the Torinus anomalous name of Murphy, suggested that

Buster Crabs were in season, and that grilled on toast and accompanied by a green salad and a bottle of Chablis they would make perfect luncheon fare. The combination exceeded his prediction. I had been waiting all this time for a repeat performance. The next time we were in New Orleans, and the next, unfortunately, Buster Crabs were not in season. A Buster Crab is a soft-shelled crab which has just reached that point of obesity where it breaks out of its shell. It has not yet started to grow a new one. Kept confined in special tubs, alert watchers pluck them out just at the proper moment. Well we were at Antoine's again on our recent visit, and Buster Crabs were in season! My wife and I greeted the news with soft screams of delight, promptly ordered exactly the same luncheon we had enjoyed some six TPRTS AGO. How were they? Excellent. But not anywhere nearly so fine as our memory recalled them.

Possibly as a result of this experience, we visited a number of new-to-us restaurants this time. It is also true that the quality of any given restaurant seldom remains constant. The fact that you enjoyed one several years ago is no guarantee of the same satisfaction today. The mark of a great restaurant, as a matter of fact, is con-

Example: We had made reservations at Arnaud's, where we had enjoyed a fine dinner two years ago. But before we got there a friend in New Orleans told us Arnaud's had lost its old chef and worse yet the waiters and chefs were on strike.

On the other hand he put us onto a real find, the Vieaux Carre Restaurant, which we had avoided for years because we understood it was not too good. He told us two young architects had taken it over several months ago, completely redecorated it and were out to out-do Antoine's. At the moment I would highly recommend it to any New Orleans' visitor. It was delightful. And for some unknown reason, the new managers introduced themselves. Benedict Ciminy and Sellers Meric, and proffered a fine bottle of rose wine on the house.

Among other new experiences was a luncheon at Kolb's, the fine old German restaurant we had previously avoided in favor of the French. A meal of boiled beef was just the ticket interspersed with all that rich dining. And we found there the finest wine card of German varieties we have seen anywhere short of Europe, and at most modest prices. How about a bottle of Berncastler Rothberg 1959 for $4.25?

In the old section of Kolb's the two-bladed ceiling fans are still operated by leather belts.

Then there was dinner at a so-called neighborhood restaurant in the Garden District, the kind that native New Orleans residents keep to themselves. This one was Pasqual Manale's, specializing in Italian fare. My choice was barbecued shrimp, whole shrimp boiled in the shells and bathing in the richest, most highly seasoned sauce I have ever eaten. And when I got through diving into that dish right up to my elbows I also needed a bath.

There are other traditions one must observe in New Orleans, however. Like that strong black coffee and those wonderful doughnuts at the Morning Call. The coffee is so strong only the bravest can drink it without liberal dilution of hot milk. I asked the manager how many cups they serve a day. They're open 24 hours, seven days a week, and all they serve is coffee and their wonderful doughnuts right out of the kitchen. He estimated 4,000

Or oysters at Felix' or any of the other innumerable oyster bars around the city. The Chesapeake Bay oysters have their fans, but I'll take mine from the Gulf. To do it up really right you should start out in late morning with a Ramos Gin Fizz at the Roosevelt, cross the street to the oyster bar for a dozen in sauce you mix yourself, and finish this off with one of those wonderful Po Boy sand-

I have always wondered why our bakers in this part of the country cannot duplicate that marvelous New Orleans' French bread.

Restoration of the old buildings in the French Quarter is continuing apace, and there are changes to be observed at each visit. But sometimes restorations are not universally applauded, like the one recently completed at the Old Absinthe House. A very nice cocktail lounge has been created in the rear, but it doesn't seem to fit with the traditional decor. When we dropped in it was inhabited by a young lady playing modern jazz, and one lonesome couple. The new decor and modern jazz apparently can't compete with Dixieland a la Pete Fountain's or Preservation Hall.

All of the twist shows which had almost taken over Bourbon Street on our visit two years ago are now gone and the famous street has returned to its traditional fare of bumps and grinds. There was one thing about the twist joints—at least the gals could dance.

One final note before we leave New Orleans for another several years. When I ordered a martini at Antoine's guess how it was served. On the rocks! The campaign has reached a dead end.

Markings Obscured

BY WALTER RASMUSSEN

In the near future, Appleton will have to make a decision on the changing role of College Avenue. To arrive at this decision will require a conscientious examination of the presently existing physical circumstances of the avenue, a recognition of the changes that have occurred, a realization that the space required for vehicular and pedestrian traffic and for vehicular parking is constantly growing while the physical dimensions of College Avenue remain unchanged, and the formulation of a program to shift some of these burdens to other locations.

College Avenue in the Central Business District has a right-of-way width of 96 feet. This right-of-way has been completely paved with a 16 foot sidewalk on each side of the street and a 64 foot pavement in between. The pavement has been divided into four 9foot traffic lanes and two 14-foot wide diagonal parking lanes. Today's high-powered motor vehicles require a minimum of 12-foot traffic lanes for maneuvering and travel. The inadequacy of these existing traffic lanes, is evident when their width is compared to the parking stalls in the city's new parking ramps which average 9 feet in width to allow for the storage, not the movement of vehicles.

Diagonal Parking

Much has been said about the diagonal parking on College Avenue, but a closer inspection of the actual arrangement of these parking spaces and the response of the drivers to the pavement markings regulating such parking is revealing. First, It would seem that the flat angle of the stalls (40 degrees) is not compatible with the angle that the driver estimates to be proper, and his vehicle is parked in such a fashion that the use of adjacent stalls is impaired if not prohibited.

Secondly, the failure to posttion properly the vehicle in the parking stail results in increased interference with the moving traffic because the vehicle entering and leaving the stall requires more space.

Third, the additional effort required to park a vehicle next to an improperly parked vehicle reduces the efficiency and the desirability of the parking space. It is suggested that those who are skeptical, count the number of vehicles that are steadily increasing congestion on College Avenue which if permitted to continue could result in the strangulation of the College Avenue Business District.

What changes have occurred since the "good old days" which have contributed to the present congestion on College Avenue? If we turn back the clock or the calendar if you prefer, we find that College Avenue extended from the Fox River Fairgrounds (presently the Knoke Lumber Co.) on the west to Green Bay Road on the east, a distance of about two miles. How many readers remember when Highway 41 entered Appleton on Memorial Drive and followed Richmend Street to Wisconsin Avenue and then turned east on Wisconsin Avenue towards Little Chute? This arrangement divided the length of College Avenus approximately in half with highway traffic permitted to enter College Avenue at about the west end of the present business district.

Avenue Extension

It was only in the late 30s or early 40s when Highway 41 moved to Northland Avenue and to its present location west of Appleton. Who remembers that it was only about 10 years ago when College Avenue was extended from the west city limits to Highway 41, a distance of one and one-half miles, and placed on the state highway system as Highway 125? Who remembers that it was only four short years ago that the Old John Street bridge was replaced by the College Avenue bridge and College Avenue became five miles in length and the only continuous east-west route south of Wisconsin Ave-

College Avenue will probably always remain as the east-west street most nearly dividing the city of Appleton in half and because of this physical location traffic will probably continue to increase. Traffic volumes west of Linwood Avenue and east of Walter Avenue have virtually doubled in the last three years. The extension of College Avenue eastward to Highway 55 will further increase traffic volumes. Before the College Avenue Bridge and the extension of College Avenue westward, the majority of the traffic on College Avenue was local in character or had an origin or destination in the Business District. Now this has changed because traffic has been introduced into College Avenue which has no destination in the business district and only wishes to pass through this area.

Major Route

These road improvements have changed College Avenue from a local street to a major primary route that is regional in character and these charges, coupled with the traditional attitude of the Appleton merchants to offer a wide diversity of goods have made downtown Appleton a regional shopping place.

We should be thankful that the founding fathers reserved 96 feet of right-of-way for this street, for if they hadn't the demise of the College Avenue business district might already be complete! Unfortunately or otherwise, the horse and buggy of yesterday has become the motor vehicle of today; the encea-year shopping trip has become a once-a-week trip; the village of several hundred souls has become the urbanized region of more than 100,000 people; and the general store and its cracker barrel has been replaced by the department store.

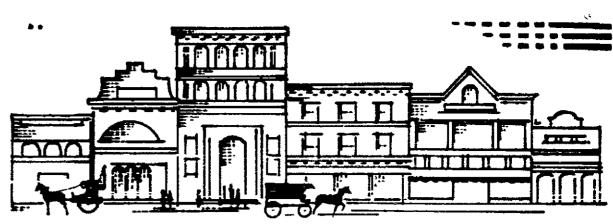

In essence, everything about College Avenue has changed except the width of the right-ofway. Just as the teen-aged boy suddenly shoots upward in a sudden growth spurt that leaves his long pants looking like knickers, so has traffic outgrewn College Avenue's fixed dimensions.

Few Basic Facts

What can be done, or rather, what must be done to adjust the use of College Avenue to its changed circumstances? First of all, let us agree on a few basic facts about a city and its components.

1. A city to be complete needs people of all kinds and talents just as the human body needs various types of cells, genes. hormones, etc. To attract these diverse peoples, the city must be able to use their talents and in return to provide them with living circumstances that are desireable to them.

Some of these living circumstances are: adequate utilities, good schools, churches, recreational facilities, moderate tax rates, good shopping facilities, opportunites for good employment, and many others.

Two of the above listed living circumstances have a direct relationship to College Avenue Business District: namely, a moderate tax rate and good shopping facilities. A moderate tax rate exists today in Appleton partly as a result of the volume of commercial activity on College Avenue.

Dense Development

College Avenue, because of its ability to serve a larger area than is contained within the city limits, has a more dense commercial development than would normally occur. This dense commercial devlopment requires fewer municipal services than the same dollar evaluation would require if it were to be spread out or scattered in a less dense fashion and the tax yield as related to the amount of municipal services rendered is more favorable and therefore more desirable.

The College Avenue business district would be rated as a good shopping facility by reason of the diversity of goods and services alone that are available to the patron at this single location. Now, since College Avenue helps the City of Appleton to be complete, College Avenue must be worth keeping and improving.

2. The movement of traific within the city is essential to maintaining a healthy community. There are no better illustrations of this fact than the large metropolitan areas.

When traffic movements became so restricted that the elements requiring these traffic movements could no longer exist in their particular location, these elements relocated went out of business.

Traffic Shifted

When traffic is shifted as a result of the relocation of the traffic generators, the area vacated is generally left in a condition of commercial or industrial blight Some "come-back" of cemmercial or industrial activity can be made if these "comeback" uses do not have traffic generating capacities that will once more produce intense traffic congestion.

In Milwaukee, the tax base loss in some areas resulting from the relocation of industrial and commercial activities followed by the formation of ethnic ghettos is serious enough to cause the discussion of seeking new sources of tax revenues other than the traditional real estate source.

3. With the exception of a very limited number of services such as "drive-in" bank facilities, the patron in the downtown area must leave his vehicle in order to obtain the goods and services that are available in the College Avenue business district.

While a person is driving a vehicle he is not consuming goods and services. In as subtle a fashion as can be managed, the vehicle not wishing to stop in the business district must be separated from the vehicle that desires to stop in this district. When this is accomplished, the vehicle moving through the bus-

Bitterness Saturates Life in Panama Since Rioting in Zone

BY ROBERT BERRELEZ

PANAMA (AP)-Boly Khan has changed the sign over his cocktail lounge-the Club 27but not much.

For weeks after the bloody fighting between Panamanians and Americans on the borders of the Panama Canal Zone the sign said: "We don't serve gringoes"

Now it says: "No dogs or Zonians allowed."

The subtle change seems to say that while he wouldn't turn down a buck from an American tourist he's still mad at Americans associated in any way with the Canal Zone Thus it does not appear that the volcano of illfeeling which erupted on the night of Jan. 9 subsided much —or is it likely to.

1903 Treaty

The bitterness goes back to the treaty of 1903 and Teddy Roosevelt. He saw the Isthmus of Panama as "one of the future highways of civilization." and was determined that the United States should build that highway. The treaty, crux of all the troubles yet to come, granted the United States a zone of land across the isthmus. This zone included the site where Ferdinand de Lesseps and a French company had been struggling nearly 25 years to build a canal.

Now. Panama wants to establish full sovereignty over the Canal Zone and obtain eventual control of the canal itself. The United States refuses to negotiate these changes in the 1903 treaty.

Panamarian opinion calling for a new treaty is backed by fiercely articulate left-wing nationalists This is the area where, because the canal issues seem tailor-made for their purposes, the Castroites and Communists have concentrated their forces.

Cooler Heads

Some cooler Panamanians, like Dr. Roberto (Tito) Arias. feel a new treaty is necessary. but believe the long-range importance of the canal to Penama's future has been exaggerated.

A member of one of Panema's traditional rulms families. Arias sums it up this way:

"Granted all that Panama wants and all that the United States conceivably could give even with unreasonable charity, our basic problems, overpopulation and underdevelopment, would not be solved."

15,000 Jobs

The Canal Zone operation provides 15,000 jobs, he said, while Panamanians create 25,000 new job seekers every year. Total canal revenues of $60 million annually would pay for just haif of Panama's annual imports.

The implications of a new canal outside Panama have not been lost on a few Panamanians Ruben D. Carles, a leading economist, asks: What can Panama do with an abandoned zone, without the $85 million it provides annually to the national economy and with a nearly obsolete and empty canal?

The arguments of this minlscule minority, are ignored in presidential campaign speeches and newspaper editorials.

Said the backer of one presi-Saw Rebellion dential hopeful: "It would be political suicide to attempt to inject reason into the popular clamor for a new treaty at this

Some 30 years earlier, however, representatives of the United States and Nueva Granadalater Colombia — signed a treaty granting the U.S. commercial concessions in return for an American pledge to guarantee the sovereignty of Nueva Granada over that territory.

De Lesseps' fortunes ebbed in the Panama venture. The project was undermined by financial scandals, intrigue and d' ease, notably yellow fever, Between 1881 and 1888 there were 5.527 deaths, 1.026 due to yellow fever and 1.368 to malaria At its peak in 1884, the French company had 19,000 men on the pay-

In 1889, the French company did little in the canal waiting for American willingness to pay $40 million for the canal contract.

Several times Panama had seceded formally from Nueva Granada, only to return to the fold for various reasons. Matters boiled to a head in 1903 when the United States agreed to buy the French concession Colombia balked over the terms of a canal treaty with the "nited States This convention, called the Hay-Herran treaty. would give the United States a 100-year lease indefinitely renewable, over the Canal Zone. The United States also recognized Colombian sovereignty over the zone Colombia's obligation to militarily protect the caral and Trans-Isthmian Railroad, and law enforcement by both American, Colombian and mixed courts.

These conditions were taken out of the subsequent 1903 treaty with Panama and provided the basic elements of the current dispute.

The Colombian Congress in effect rejected the Hay-Herran treaty in October 1903, setting in motion the forces that were to determine the fate of the isthmus within the menth.

Secretary of State John Hay had predicted rebellion in the isthmus if Colombia rejected the treaty. The same rumors were circulating in world capitals, even in Bogota. There was more fact than fancy to the rumors. A revolutionary junta had been organized in Panama and one of its members already was in New York seeking assurances of American intervention and quick diplomatic recognition. At this time there appeared on the scene a young French engineer, Fhilippe Bunau-Varilla. He conferreed with Roosevelt and Hay and, among other things, learned that American naval units had been prepared for a desh to the isthmus in the event of an emergency.

The United States completed the canal in 10 years, employing as many as 40,000 men at one time, eradicating yellow fever and malaria, improving sanitary and living conditions while giving Panamanians a touch of prosperity such as they had not known before.

Guilt Complex

It is said much of the current anti-U.S. sentiment among Panamanians stems from a guilt complex over the manner in which their independence was obtained; that by booting out the Yankees, or even seeming to want to, they'd restore a meas-

Red China Becomes One-Toothed Dragon Since Its Split With Russia; but It's Still a Terror

WASHINGTON (AP) - Without Soviet military aid. Red

China is a one-tooth dragon. So long as the Sino-Soviet split continues over how best to attain world communism, it is one of the most important political facts in the world today.

The United States' view of Red China, sans Soviet military aid, was presented in a little-noticed speech last year by Roger Hilsman, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs.

He said: "The free nations of Asia are by no means out of danger. Communist China is still capable of grave and costly mischief. But it is not a formidable power in terms of modern tech-

In terms of manpower. Red China now has the world's largest standing armed force: 23 million men. The army consists of an estimated 25 million men: the others are in the technical services and air force. Insofar as Western intelligence knows, China is not yet a nuclear power, but for 10 years China was sheltered beneath the nuclear umbrella raised by the Soviet Union.

In brief, the Red Chinese army's mobility is believed to be fairly limited. This has prompted the Chinese to distribute the army by regions, maintaining large concentrations
